SOLDIERS TEN COMMANDMENTS.

(1) Thou shalt not scrounge, neither shalt thou swing the lead, lest thy shadow be brought to light of day.

(2) Thou shalt not take the name of the Commanding Officer, the Intelligence Officer, the Field Officers, or any other Officer in vain, or thou shalt have thy name inscribed on 'Offence Report' and plead thereby.

(3) Honour the name of thy pay sergeant all the days of thy life, so that thy credits may be sound.

(4) Thou shalt not fill thyself up with beer and annoy the sergeant-major lest thy noise be ceased by 10 pm.

(5) Five and one half days shalt thy labour, and on the sixth and seventh do twice as much.

(6) If it come to pass that thy zeal and the sweat of thy brow cause mention of thee in Routine Orders as being elevated to the dizzy heights of Lance-Corporal, even though it be temporary, acting and unpaid, let thy thanks be humble.

(7) Thou shalt not take unto thyself a comrades kit or his cash, neither shalt thou borrow when the owner be not present, lest thy sins be visited on thee by the quickness of the hand that blacketh the eye.

(8) Thou shalt not fritter away thy worldly goods by the playing of poker or betting on any sport, lest the voice of the Sergeant-Major be heard, saying,' Render unto me thy odds, and leave thy monies where they lyeth!

(9) Thou shalt not grumble at thy food or thy drink or anything else that the Army giveth thee.

(10) And when it shall come to pass that thy time art expired, thou shalt enbout for thy home. There thou shalt take unto thyself strange garments and be known as a ' 'eivvy'. And thou shalt study the dole and the drawing thereof, and for many moons thou shalt take it easy and rest from thy labours. Yea.....and it was so..
