

In the single men's compartment, the arrangements for ventilation were but little better. The fittings in each compartment appeared to have been badly planned; and the bed places were small and closely packed. The captain, the surgeon, and the officers, appear to have done all that they could to enforce cleanliness, and to preserve the health of the passengers. But pure air is an indispensable condition of health, and we were not, under the circumstances, surprised to learn that—although only two deaths had occurred, one from typhoid fever and one from peritonitis—there had been much sickness during the voyage.

We found the surgery to be sufficiently furnished, and the hospitals of fair size, but close and ill ventilated. The closets were in order. There was a condensing apparatus in good condition, and there had been an abundant supply of water during the voyage. The passengers' cooking stove was found to be too small for the number of people, and some inconvenience had been felt on that account.

We inspected the various kinds of provisions and found them to be of excellent quality, and on making inquiry of the immigrants as to their treatment during the voyage, they expressed themselves satisfied, and stated that the surgeon, the captain, and his officers, had been uniformly kind and attentive to them. We have pleasure, therefore, in recommending that the usual gratuities may be given to these officers.

We have, &c.,

DANIEL POLLEN,
T. M. PHILSON, M.D.,
Health Officer.

I. J. BURGESS,
Chief Harbour Master.

The Hon. the Minister for Immigration, Wellington.

I have the honor herewith to forward the copy of a letter from Anne Delaney, complaining that a written character she gave to the Immigration Agent in Dublin has not been forwarded here.

Sub-Enclosure to Enclosure in No. 52.

ANNE DELANEY to Dr. POLLEN.

SIR,—

Auckland, 21st February, 1873.

I have to bring to your notice that I arrived in the immigrant ship "Warwick," and before I received my order for a passage, in Dublin, I was required to give the Agent-General's Department my last character. I handed it to the officer in Dublin, who informed me that it would be transmitted to New Zealand, and would reach there before the "Warwick" arrived.

In consequence of not having this document with me, I am unable to procure a good situation. Each person I apply to asks for a written character.

D. Pollen, Esq., General Government Agent,
Auckland.

I have, &c.,

ANNE DELANEY.
