A D D E N D U M.

IN my remarks on the "Leading Features of new Rules Registered," page 3, I stated that "the provisions of 'The Friendly Societies Act, 1867,' required that the rules of a society could not be registered until the tables of contributions payable for the assurance of sums on sickness or death had been certified by an actuary or person appointed by the Registrar." It appears to me, on reviewing this portion of the report (which has been printed off), that, as it stands, it may lead to the belief that all rules registered under the Act of 1867 contained tables of contributions that were duly certified by an actuary. As a matter of fact the case is almost exactly the reverse of this. The provision of the Act requiring this certificate was not, until latterly, in any way carried out; and, as a result, there is hardly a single set of rules registered under the Act of 1867 containing a table of contributions that was certified to, or even that would have been certified to, by an actuary. This registration of insufficient tables of contributions has produced much evil, as it has resulted in a feeling of confidence in their sufficiency and in the solvency of the societies which the tables themselves did not justify; and a low rate of contributions having been established, there is a general disinclination to add thereto. Much work has in consequence been thrown on this department in the way of endeavouring to set forth to societies the unsound basis on which they were working. It is, however, very satisfactory to have to state that the action taken by me under section 9, subsection 5 (b, c) of the Act of 1877, is apparently bearing fruit, as, since the 30th of June last, two districts of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, containing in the aggregate 19 lodges, have submitted for registration new rules containing tables of contributions that are satisfactory in amount, and give a better assurance of the future success of these societies.

Since the report went to press a few slight alterations have been found necessary in the Statistical Tables appended thereto, which will affect one or two of the figures given on page 12. The total expenses of management for 1877, it will be seen, were £5,378 0s. 11d., instead of £5,691 15s. 8d., as there stated. This is equivalent to £635 (12s. 9d.) per member. The expenses of management for the lodges of the Manchester Unity amounted in the aggregate to £3,416 16s. 9½d., or £650 (13s.) per member. Again, the total cost of medical attendance was £7,715 10s. 6d., or £912 (18s. 3d.) per head, of which £6,839 9s. 5½d. was paid from management funds. The medical expenses per head in the Manchester Unity were £885. Lastly, the aggregate of mortgages on freehold property should have been given as £35,783 15s. 8d., instead of £35,933 15s. 8d.

REPORT.

I.—BUSINESS OF THE REGISTRY OFFICE.

1. DEPARTMENTAL WORK DURING YEAR ENDED 30TH JUNE, 1879.

As the Registrar's first report was for the six months ended the 30th June, 1878, it has been thought desirable, for the purpose of submitting a report for a whole year, to make this report cover the operations for the year ended the 30th June, 1879, instead of the 31st December, 1878.

The departmental work of the office cannot be measured by the number of registrations effected, as a large amount of labour and correspondence is thrown upon the Registrar in dealing with other matters essential to the due and efficient administration of the Act. The following enumeration of matters attended to and work done during the year will indicate in a measure the general character of the duties to be performed:—

(a.) The Consideration of the contemplated Provisions of "The Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1878;" the Preparation of Regulations thereunder; and the Revision of Model Rules necessitated thereby.—The necessity for amendments to "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877," having become apparent from the experience acquired in the administration of that Act, the consideration of the nature and form of proposals for such amendment, and the correspondence with societies in relation to such proposals, devolved upon the Registrar. As a result of the passing of the Act, additional regulations had to be framed and, having been approved by the Governor, to be issued to societies. The model rules framed for the guidance of societies were revised to embrace the additional requirements of the Amendment Act. When this Act was circulated, a memorandum, drawn up by the Registrar, explanatory of the provisions of the Act, was forwarded therewith.

(b.) Framing Regulations under "The Trade Union Act, 1878."—The Registrar of Friendly Societies being, in terms of this Act, Registrar thereunder, it became necessary to consider the provisions of the Act and to frame regulations for procedure. This has been done.

(c.) The Compilation of the Statistical Tables for 1877.—This represents a very large amount of work, the results of which will be specially dealt with further on.

(d.) The Transference on to Cards of Information given in the Quinquennial Return of Sickness and Mortality in respect of about 10,000 Persons.—The effect and advantages of this system will be referred to further on. This transference is a step precedent to tabulation of the information given, and is a tedious operation. This work has been completed.

(e.) The Examination of these Returns, and the Issue to Societies of Queries on Defects and Errors therein.

(f.) Advice tendered to many Friendly Societies on Points of Internal Management, Scales of Contributions, &c.—With the desire of making the administration of the Friendly Societies Act of benefit to the various societies, and inducing societies to take advantage of its provisions, the Registrar has at all times willingly responded to requests for advice asked for, although at times involving much consideration of the intention and provisions of the Act.

(g.) Publication and Issue of Model Tables of Contributions, with Explanatory Observations.—These very important tables have been completed since the issue of the previous report, and have been distributed to the societies. As the majority of the societies were working under scales of contributions that would be deemed by actuaries as inadequate to meet, in the future, the benefits promised, the advantage of laying before these societies a trustworthy table cannot be overrated, as they will be able to discover where the insufficiency of their contributions may be, and, if really desirous of preserving their solvency, have a guide as to the measure of alteration to be made. In some cases societies have been anxious for the issue and adoption of these tables, as tending to give a more assured tone to their financial position. When issuing these tables the Registrar issued a circular-memorandum explanatory of them, and the mode of applying them, and urging their adoption by societies. These tables and circular are appended as a schedule to this report.

(h.) Lengthy Correspondence with Societies, arising from Mistakes in Applications for Registry or from Rules submitted not complying with the Act.—It would be a difficult matter to distinguish the amount of correspondence on each of the different heads mentioned, but the number of letters, &c., recorded amounted during the year to 266—many letters received not requiring to be placed on record. The correspondence issuing from the office has occupied 708 pages of the letter-book.

(i.) Reference of Rules to Revising Barrister, and Dealing with his Report, either by Registration or Forwarding Copies of his Objections.—Technical difficulties in the working of the Act have involved many discussions and settlements of principle by interview between the Registrar and Revising Barrister.

(k.) Personal Examination of Branch Rules by Registrar in Terms of Regulation 50.

(l.) Recording (on notice given) Changes of Name, Place, Trustees, Secretaries, &c.—This always entails a certain amount of correspondence, often increased by the information being insufficiently given.

(m.) Framing and Issue of Forms of Return and Abstract for Quinquennial Valuations.—The preparation of these forms has been purely an actuarial matter, and the duty consequently has devolved upon the Actuary.

(n.) Devising Cards and New Forms of Annual Return, and Issue thereof, with subsequent Explanatory Correspondence.—The remarks on the card system and the new forms will be found further on. The card system being new to the societies, correspondence was entailed explanatory of the action to be taken.

(o.) Correspondence with Trade Unions relative to proposed Registration and Administration of Act.

2. SOCIETIES REGISTERED DURING THE YEAR.

A list of applications for registry, and how disposed of, and a list of registered societies to date, are given in Schedules I. and II. appended hereto.

The following societies have registered [the numbers given are the register numbers]:—

No. 143.—Court Queen of the Isles, No. 2,703, Ancient Order of Foresters, Lyttelton.—This society was previously registered, but applied for cancelment of registry in order to register a complete amendment of rules, such amendment having been practically prohibited by the provision of "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877," which required amendments to be gazetted; and this course was adopted to evade that difficulty. This court contributes to, and takes part by delegates in the government of, the United Canterbury District, but is registered as a separate society.

No. 144.—Wellington District, Ancient Order of Foresters.—This society was previously registered as the United Wellington District, Ancient Order of Foresters, but obtained cancellation of its registration for the same reason as in the previous case, and registered anew, under the above name, as a society having branches.

No. 145.—The Auckland Branch, No. 81, Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society.—Although this society is a branch, yet, as the central body of the order is outside the colony (in Melbourne), it could only be registered as a separate society.

No. 146.—The Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand.—This society is registered as having branches. The registered office is at Dunedin. This society was also registered under a different name, but obtained cancellation of its registry for similar reasons to those given in Nos. 143, 144. This is the only friendly society in New Zealand having branches not, so far as ascertainable by the rules, affiliated to an order outside the colony. The forms and ceremonies of this society assimilate in character to those of the American Order of Odd Fellows rather than to those of the Manchester Unity.

No. 147.—The Progress Division, No. 5, of the Sons of Temperance of Australasia.—Office at Kaiapoi.

No. 148.—The New Zealand Railways Employé's Benefit Society, Christchurch Branch.

No. 149.—The New Zealand Prudential Assurance Society.—Registered office at Auckland. This is a collecting society within the meaning of section 31 of "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877."

II.—LEADING FEATURES OF NEW RULES REGISTERED.

The provisions of "The Friendly Societies Act, 1867," required that the rules of a society could not be registered until the tables of contributions payable for the assurance of sums on sickness or death had been certified to by an actuary or person appointed by the Registrar. No such provision was inserted in "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877," except in cases of deferred annuities, and a registration of rules may now be effected although the contributions may be quite inadequate to pay the promised benefits. It may, therefore, be of interest to note the leading features of the rules registered during the year, so far as they relate to the measure of the contributions provided therein.

Court Queen of the Isles, A.O.F.—The alteration chiefly consisted in an increased and graduated scale of contributions.

Old Scales.

6s. 9d. per quarter to Sick and Funeral Fund (from which surgeon's pay was to be defrayed) for members initiated prior to rules of 1873. For members initiated subsequently, following contributions to cover all expenses:—

18-22	...	...	11s. 8d. per quarter
22-25	...	...	12s. 2d. per quarter
25-28	...	...	12s. 9d. per quarter
28-31	...	...	13s. 3d. per quarter
31-34	...	...	14s. 0d. per quarter
34-37	...	...	14s. 9d. per quarter
37-40	...	...	15s. 10d. per quarter

Present Scales.

(a.) For members initiated before 8th December, 1875, 8s. 1d. per quarter to Sick and Funeral Fund (from which surgeon not to be paid), from which 2s. 1d. per quarter handed to District Funeral Fund.

(b.) For members subsequently initiated, a graduated scale as follows:—

Per qr.	Govt. Actuary's Scale.
Under 22 years, 9s. 1d. ...	8s. 4½d.
Under 25 years, 9s. 7d. ...	8s. 4½d. to 9s. 0d.
Under 28 years, 10s. 1d. ...	9s. 0d. to 9s. 9½d.
Under 31 years, 10s. 7d. ...	9s. 9½d. to 10s. 8½d.
Under 34 years, 11s. 7d. ...	10s. 8½d. to 11s. 9d.
Under 37 years, 12s. 7d. ...	11s. 9d. to 12s. 11½d.
Under 40 years, 13s. 7d. ...	12s. 11½d. to 14s. 4½d.

2s. 1d. per quarter of this to District Funeral Fund. Surgeon paid out of a separate fund.

But, although the contributions have been increased, the scale of benefits has also been largely increased, as follows:—

Old Scale.	Present Scale.
16s. per week during first six months of sickness	£1 during first six months
8s. per week during second six months of sickness	10s. during second six months
4s. per week during remainder of sickness	5s. during remainder
£12 at death of member	£20 at death of member
£8 at death of wife	£10 at death of wife

The scales of contributions for new members are exceedingly satisfactory when compared with the former scales. It is, however, to be regretted that the scale for members initiated before the 8th December, 1875, should still have been kept so low, the contributions at all ages being lower than what is required at the lowest age of twenty-two years; and the insufficiency of such rate to insure solvency is apparent when compared with the rates for the higher ages according to the Actuary's scale.

Wellington District, A.O.F.—The new rules provided for a graduated scale of contributions for new members only, instead of the old ungraduated scale. These scales are minimum scales for all the courts.

Old Scale, for Old Members.	New Scale.	Actuary's Scale.
2s. per month to Sick and Funeral Fund, and an extra 6d. per month if member over 38.	18-27—2s. 0d. per month 27-33—2s. 4d. per month 33-38—3s. 0d. per month 38-40—4s. 0d. per month	2s. 5½d. to 3s. 1d. 3s. 1d. to 3s. 8d. 3s. 8d. to 4s. 3½d. 4s. 3½d. to 4s. 7½d.

The retention of the old scale for existing members is a mistaken policy, and can but be productive of evil. The scale has been hitherto very far from sufficient, and the perpetuation of that scale tends to jeopardize the society. The contributions on account of new members are insufficient in themselves, if judged by the Actuary's scale, and therefore cannot in any way help to secure the condition of solvency imperilled by the former low scale.

Auckland Branch, H.A.C.B.S.—The amount of contribution to the Sick and Funeral Fund is left undecided by the rules, but the adoption of an ungraduated scale is evident. This is most unsatisfactory. An ungraduated scale is generally, if not in all cases, insufficient to secure the future payment of the promised benefits, and is always a source of injustice, as pressing with undue heaviness on the members at the younger age-periods, and relieving the older members from legitimate payments at the expense of the younger members. The minimum of 6d. per week fixed by the general laws of the society is, having regard to the promised benefits, an utterly inadequate payment to be made even by members entering at the early age of 18, much more so by older members.

Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand, Friendly Society.—This society has altered the scales of contributions in a most satisfactory manner, the new scale being such as to reasonably insure confidence in the ultimate success of the society.

The old and new scales to provide the usual sick and funeral benefits are subjoined.

Old Scale.	New Scale.
	Sick Fund. Funeral Fund.
	Per Quarter. Per Quarter.
5d. per week to Sick Fund; 2d. (nearly) per week to Funeral Fund.	18-20 ... 5s. 10d. ... 1s. 9d.
	21-25 ... 6s. 6d. ... 1s. 11d.
	26-30 ... 7s. 4d. ... 2s. 4d.
	31-35 ... 8s. 8d. ... 2s. 9d.
	36-40 ... 10s. 0d. ... 3s. 2d.
	41-45 ... 11s. 11d. ... 3s. 10d.

These new scales of contributions, calculated by Messrs. Leslie and Black, agree closely with the Actuary's scale. The society is to be commended on their adoption.

Progress Division of the Sons of Temperance of Australasia, Kaiapoi.—The benefits given by this society are—20s. per week during the first six months' sickness, 10s. during the second six months', 5s. per week afterwards, or a bonus extinguishing all claims on the society; £20 at death of a member, and £10 at death of a member's wife. The unusual feature is, the bonus instead of protracted-sickness payments. As it is the protracted sickness which fluctuates greatly when the numbers are small, especially the sickness inherent to advanced age, the exercise of this provision, if care is taken in fixing the amount, will be found useful in relieving the society from uncertain claims that cannot be well estimated. The scale of contributions is, however, too low for the benefits promised.

Scale adopted, Sick and Funeral Fund.	Govt. Actuary's Scale.
16 to 20, two-thirds of 0s. 10d. per week = 6¾d.	7d. to 7½d.
20 to 25, " 0s. 11d. " = 7¾d.	7½d. to 8d.
25 to 30, " 1s. 0d. " = 8d.	8d. to 9d.
30 to 35, " 1s. 2d. " = 9¾d.	9d. to 10½d.
35 to 40, " 1s. 4d. " = 10¾d.	10½d. to 1s. 0¾d.
40 to 45, " 1s. 6d. " = 1s.	1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 2¾d.

The other third of the contributions being devoted to management expenses.

The New Zealand Prudential Assurance Society.—This is the first representative in New Zealand of a group of societies ("collecting societies") numerous and important in England, and with reference to which section 30 of the Imperial Act (incorporated as section 31 of the New Zealand Act) was framed. This society differs, however, from the bulk of societies included in the group, in not being a mere burial society, as it grants life assurances to adults up to £200, the statutory limit. In the character of the business contemplated it assimilates closely to the Industrial Branch of the Prudential Assurance Company in England. Persons of both sexes are admitted to membership, the minimum age being sixteen, and insurances are granted on the lives of children of members. Insurers under £50 obtain full benefits after six months' membership; above £50, half benefits in six months, full benefits in twelve months. No medical examination is required prior to admission of members insuring to a less amount than £50. This appears to be a hazardous provision, though in accordance with the practice of the Prudential Assurance Company in England, and may, if extreme care be not exercised by the collectors, result in much loss to the society.

Court Sir George Grey, A.O.F.—A graduated scale of contributions according to age has been adopted, instead of a uniform contribution at all ages. The new scale, however, only applies to new members, and, so far as they are concerned, is insufficient according to the Actuary's scale. No provision has been made to meet the deficiency which may have arisen from the former insufficient contributions; for, although, under the old rate of contributions, the scale of benefits was about 25 per cent. lower than the scale now established, yet the old rate was insufficient to insure continued solvency.

Old Scale.		New Scale.		Actuary's Scale.
6d. per week.	18 to 27 ...	7d. per week ...		7½d. to 9½d.
	27 to 33 ...	8d. „ ...		9½d. to 11d.
	33 to 37 ...	10d. „ ...		11d. to 1s. 0½d.
	37 to 40 ...	1s. 1d. „ ...		1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2½d.

Sanctuary Sir George Grey, A.O.S.—The old rate was a uniform contribution of 2s. per month, apparently for all purposes. Without altering the scale of benefits, the contributions have been graduated according to age, and increased to more satisfactory amounts for the Sick and Funeral Fund, but only for new members.

Present Scale, Sick and Funeral Fund.		Actuary's Scale.
18 to 30 ...	1s. 6d. per month ...	1s. 4d. to 1s. 10½d.
30 to 35 ...	2s. 0d. „ ...	1s. 10½d. to 2s. 2½d.
35 to 38 ...	2s. 6d. „ ...	2s. 2½d. to 2s. 5½d.
38 to 40 ...	3s. 0d. „ ...	2s. 5½d. to 2s. 8d.

Otago District, I.O.O.F., M.U.—The new rules of this society evince great care in their preparation, and are in their general provisions a model for imitation; but the scale of contributions is not sufficiently high. Formerly a uniform rate at all ages was paid. Now a graduated scale of contributions for members admitted after the 1st July, 1879, has been established. This scale is, however, too low for the promised benefits, as will be evidenced from a comparison with the Government Actuary's scale. No provision has been included for making good the accumulated deficiencies on former contributions, and, as such deficiencies must not only increase in respect of the contributions of old members, but be somewhat added to by the insufficient contributions of new members, the future prospects of this society cannot be considered as otherwise than unsatisfactory, unless the funds be largely benefited by an exceptional absence of claims for sick-pay, or by successful investments, or a very high rate of secession—gains so uncertain that they ought not to be taken into calculation.

III.—THE AMENDMENT ACT OF 1878.

Soon after “The Friendly Societies Act, 1877,” was brought into operation it became manifest that to increase its usefulness certain amendments were necessary. To meet these a Bill was introduced during the session of 1878. This Bill, which became law on the 29th October, 1878, will be found in its statutory form in Schedule III. to this report. It repeals that portion of the 12th section of the principal Act which required that amendments of rules should be published in the Gazette, and which, by the expense which would have attended such publication, had been found to act practically as a barrier to the registration of new sets of rules as amendments of the original rules—a course commending itself as in other respects most convenient. It provides that information as to sickness, mortality, &c., shall be rendered by societies annually instead of quinquennially, as heretofore; thus assimilating the procedure in this respect to that which obtains in Victoria, and constituting a point of departure from the precedent afforded by the Imperial Friendly Societies Statute of 1875. A provision of the Act of 1877 (section 13, 1, f), which had seemed to establish the principle that a valuer should ascertain by personal investigation the correctness of the premises tendered to him, and thus combine the duties of an auditor and an actuary, was replaced by one which served to enforce the distinction between the two duties, and to confine the valuer to the exercise of strictly actuarial functions. An absolute prohibition was enacted against the appropriation of moneys belonging to a sick and funeral fund to management and medical expenses; and rules of societies were required to incorporate a provision for the payment of the latter out of contributions distinct from those allocated to the sick and funeral fund. In all complaints on behalf of the Registrar respecting failure on the part of a society to furnish any document required by the Act to be furnished, the onus of proof is now made to lie with the society. Lastly, in view of the circumstance that the majority of the bodies with which the Friendly Societies Acts have to deal are in reality only branches of large orders, the central offices of which are in England or Australia, permission is expressly accorded to them to register rules implying subordination to governing bodies outside the colony, or to the general laws of an order. The remaining provisions of the Amendment Act are of minor importance, and are chiefly enacted with a view to the removal of ambiguities in the principal Act. It will be seen, therefore, that the effect of the Amending Act is not to alter or reverse any of the fundamental principles which lie at the basis of the Act of 1877, but simply, by means of a few additions and substitutions, to carry those principles more fully into effect.

The passing of this Bill rendered necessary a few additional regulations of a technical nature to alter the mode of procedure in the case of amendments of rules. These regulations, together with the forms for procedure which they prescribe, will be found in Schedule IV.

It was considered advisable also to issue to societies a memorandum explanatory of the provisions of the Amendment Act. This memorandum, to which is appended a list of the advantages accruing from registration, is contained in Schedule V.

The model rules were also revised to suit the provisions of the Amendment Act, and copies issued to societies.

IV.—THE MODEL TABLES.

It was mentioned in the Registrar's former report that a series of standard tables of contributions was in course of preparation, on the responsibility of Mr. Frankland, the actuary attached to the office. It was mentioned that the issue of these tables was delayed owing to the difficulty attaching to several of the actuarial questions at issue, more particularly the question as to the proper mode of estimating allowances receivable in protracted sickness, there being a difference of opinion on this subject amongst the highest authorities. After mature deliberation, and after corresponding, in a private capacity, with several actuaries of eminence, Mr. Frankland decided that, under the circumstances, it would be advisable to take into account the practice of reducing the sick-pay in cases of protracted sickness; and he was thus enabled to indorse, after the correction of a few inaccuracies elicited by an exhaustive examination, the tables mentioned in the Registrar's previous report, which had been prepared and recommended by Messrs. Leslie and Black, of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, in Dunedin. Amongst the actuaries consulted, Mr. Frankland desires to record his thanks especially to Messrs. A. M. Black, F.I.A., of the Australian Mutual Provident Society, Sydney; George King, F.I.A., of the Alliance Assurance Company, London; and William Sutton, F.I.A., of the Friendly Societies Registration Office for the United Kingdom, for the valuable advice he has received from them, though of course they must not be held responsible for the conclusions at which he has arrived. Whilst approving generally the recognition, in valuations and in the computation of tables, of the practice of reducing sick-pay, Mr. Frankland wishes it to be understood that he regards protracted sickness as a risk which even more imperatively requires to be spread over a considerable number of members than sickness of an acute nature. The tables, with introductory observations explanatory thereof, are appended in Schedule VI. hereto.

V.—THE CARD SYSTEM AND NEW RETURN FORMS.

A mass of data respecting the vital statistics of registered friendly societies was available through the quinquennial returns collected under section 13 (1, c) of the Act, and mentioned in the Registrar's first report. To utilize these data for actuarial purposes, it became necessary to transcribe the information on to cards—one card being allotted to each member—in order that the data might afterwards be classified in various ways. The form of card used for this purpose is here subjoined:—

Name of Society :

Name : _____

Occupation : _____

Mode of admission (whether by initiation, reinstatement, or clearance) : _____

Amount of fee paid on admission : £ _____ s. _____ d.

Of Member. Of Wife.

Year of birth : _____ 18 . _____ 18 .

Date of admission : _____

Date of exit : _____

Mode of exit : _____

Cause of death : _____

Experience of Sickness :

From _____ years of age to _____ years of age.

Year in which Sickness occurred.	Period for which Sick-pay was allowed.		Rate of Payment per Week.
	Weeks.	Days.	Shillings.	Pence.

The laborious process of transcription is now completed, and it is therefore hoped that valuable statistics, based on these returns, may appear as a schedule to the Registrar's next report.

It was considered that much of the labour of transcription might be saved for the future, and also much labour to the secretaries of societies, by issuing blank cards, and desiring the secretaries to fill in certain particulars respecting members who joined during the past year; and this plan has accordingly been adopted. The labour thus saved to secretaries consists in the filling-in on the return-sheets, now to be rendered annually instead of quinquennially, of names of members in respect of whom no particular contingency (such as sickness, marriage, secession, or death) happened during the period to which the return relates; while the labour saved to the department consists in the avoidance of the transcription, from return-sheets to cards, of information relating to members who joined during the year. Cards for the year 1878 (i.e., one card for each member who joined during 1878) have been received up to this time from the following societies. They have been very satisfactorily filled up.

	No. of Registered Lodges, Courts, &c.	No. of Lodges, &c., furnishing Cards.
I. Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ...	56	41
II. Independent Order of Odd Fellows ...	1	0
III. Ancient Order of Foresters ...	38	19
IV. Ancient Order of Shepherds ...	1	1
V. Independent Order of Rechabites ...	2	2
VI. Sons and Daughters of Temperance ...	3	0
VII. Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society ...	7	2
VIII. Miscellaneous Societies ...	4	3
Total ...	112	68

The cards thus received constitute a part of the information required under section 4 of the Amendment Act. The remainder of the information required under that section is rendered on return-sheets, the form of which will be found in Schedule VII. hereto.

The adoption of this form of return has relieved societies from much work, the preparation of which was a constant source of complaint; and the results obtained may be considered, if anything, even more reliable.

In conjunction with the cards, these sheets may be said to constitute a single return—the return of vital statistics which, in accordance with section 4 of the Amendment Act, is to be furnished annually in place of, or—should the Registrar in exceptional cases deem it expedient—in addition to, the quinquennial return required by section 13 (1, e) of the principal Act.

The financial return required by section 13 (1, d) of the principal Act has also been altered as to form. The form previously used, sufficiently well applicable to general and local societies, was found to be not well adapted to societies of the affiliated type (which include nearly all bodies on the New Zealand Register). Hence the form contained in Schedule VIII. has been substituted. Returns in this form for 1878 have, up to the present time, been made by the following societies:—

	No. of Registered Lodges, Courts, &c.	No. of Lodges, &c., furnishing returns.
I. Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ...	56	40
II. Independent Order of Odd Fellows ...	1	0
III. Ancient Order of Foresters ...	38	24
IV. Ancient Order of Shepherds ...	1	1
V. Independent Order of Rechabites ...	2	2
VI. Sons and Daughters of Temperance ...	3	0
VII. Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society ...	7	4
VIII. Miscellaneous Societies ...	4	3
Total ...	112	74

In this list are not included the districts, &c., of the affiliated orders, for which a special form of return was devised, as explained in the Registrar's previous report. The following districts, grand lodges, &c., have furnished, up to the present, returns for 1878:—

	No. of Registered Districts, Grand Lodges, &c.	No. of Districts, &c., furnishing returns.
I. Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ...	11	8
II. Independent Order of Odd Fellows ...	1	1
III. Ancient Order of Foresters ...	5	2
IV. Independent Order of Rechabites ...	1	0

VI.—VALUATIONS.

There have as yet been no valuations in terms of the Act returned to the Registrar. One application for a valuation has been received—viz., from the Loyal Charles Bruce Lodge, of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows. After some correspondence, the lodge decided to appoint Mr. George Leslie, one of the public valuers, to undertake the duty. There has not, however, been as yet sufficient time for the valuation to be completed, and the results to be officially communicated to the Registrar. In view of the prospect that a large number of valuations will have to be made within the next few years, forms have been devised by the Actuary for making out the returns required by section 5 of the Amendment Act to be made out, on the one hand by the secretaries of societies, and on the other by the officer conducting the valuation. These forms vary somewhat according to the class of society, but those suited to the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, which may be taken as typical, will be found in Schedule IX. hereto.

Although there have as yet been no valuations complying with the provisions of the Act, the Registrar has had his attention drawn to four private valuations of lodges belonging to the Manchester Unity—one by a Mr. Derrom, in Auckland, of the Loyal Fountain of Friendship Lodge, in that city, and three by Mr. Reuben Watson, of Nottingham, England, the well-known author of "An Explanatory Treatise on the Valuation of Friendly Societies, &c.," of the lodges of the North Westland District of Odd Fellows. With respect to the first-mentioned of these, the Registrar regrets to state that the principles of the valuation are such as no actuary would sanction. In the first place, the future liabilities are discounted at 6 per cent., which, considering the probability of a reduction in the rate of interest, is an unsafe rate to assume as the basis of a valuation; and, in the second place, the statement of present capital, which forms one of the premises of the valuation, ignores the existence of a lien to the amount of £3,500 on the freehold property of the society. The valuer brings out a surplus of £6,640 8s. 11½d., the total funds of the lodge being £8,203 11s. 1d. His report does not allude to the tables of sickness and mortality employed by him. By the introduction of the incumbrance, the above surplus is reduced to £3,140 8s. 11½d., the net liability being estimated by Mr. Derrom at £5,063 2s. 1½d. The value of this estimate cannot be ascertained from the data given; but from the faults in principle apparent in respect of some of the matters dealt with, the correctness of the amount may be open to grave doubts.

The result of Mr. Watson's valuation of the North Westland lodges of Odd Fellows is to show a deficiency in all three, although no account has been taken of the liability which will be incurred when members marry who were single at the time of valuation. The results may be summarized thus:—

	Loyal Reefton Lodge.	Loyal Westport Lodge.	Loyal Charleston Lodge.
Date of establishment ...	26th July, 1872	11th September, 1867	12th September, 1867
No. of members ...	121	81	87
Present capital ...	£615 19 8	£874 14 1	£1,146 2 8
Deficiency ...	£1,527 19 6	£684 18 4	£137 14 10

The benefits granted by these three lodges were 20s. per week during the first six months of sickness, 15s. per week during the second six months, and 7s. 6d. during subsequent sickness; £18 at the death of a member, and £12 at death of a member's wife. In the Reefton and Westport Lodges, the contributions to Sick and Funeral Fund were 6d. per week at all ages, and in the Charleston Lodge they were 8d. per week.

By glancing at the several ages of these lodges, and the amounts which, according to Mr. Watson, they ought to have in hand per member in order to be solvent, and comparing these elements with the corresponding ones in their own case, lodges and courts which have charged contributions that are low in amount and uniform at all ages will be able to convince themselves that there is grave reason for alarm as to their financial safety.

VII.—TRADE UNIONS.

By section 16 of "The Trade Union Act, 1878," the Registrar of Friendly Societies became ex-officio Registrar for the purposes of that Act, and the duty was imposed upon him of reporting annually with respect to the matters transacted by him in that capacity. The Registrar has deemed it advisable to incorporate the report thus required with that which devolves on him in his capacity as Registrar of Friendly Societies, the two subjects being closely allied, and this being in accordance with the practice of the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies for the United Kingdom.

Immediately on the passing of the Act, regulations were framed for procedure thereunder. These will be found in Schedule X. hereto.

Applications for registry under the Trade Union Act have been received from the New Zealand District of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, and from the Dunedin Operative Tailors' Society. The former had previously expressed a desire for registration under the Friendly Societies Act, but had not applied in proper form. An opinion having been asked for as to the status of branches, the matter was referred to the Solicitor-General in the following memorandum:—

"The Solicitor-General.—Can official cognizance be taken of branches of trade unions under 'The Trade Union Act, 1878'? Does the registration of a trade union cover all its branches, so long as they do not require separate laws to be registered for the branches? If so, and each branch has a distinct place of meeting, is not that somewhat in conflict with portions of the Schedule, as, for instance, the portions concerning rules for the appointment of a trustee or trustees? If a branch has its own trustees, can they be considered as the trustees appointed for the union under the rule referred to in section 4 of the Schedule? What is the meaning of the second paragraph of section 9? Is it an extension—i.e., does it extend the 9th section to trustees of a branch (although not specially registered) of a registered union? Or is it a limitation, prohibiting trustees of branches from acting under that section, unless the branch is registered as a separate union?—WM. R. E. BROWN, Registrar of Friendly Societies, 20th December, 1878."

To this the Solicitor-General replied as follows:—

"The Registrar-General.—I do not think the Trade Union Act recognizes the establishment of branch societies as such, although the establishment of branches as a mere matter of convenience among the members would be quite another thing. I mean that no such branch could be registered, except as a distinct society, if it wished to have laws, trustees, &c., of its own. The paragraph in section 9 is a limitation prohibiting branches from acting under it, unless registered as separate unions.—W. S. REID, 23rd December, 1878."

The Registrar then addressed the following further memorandum to the Solicitor-General:—

"The Solicitor-General.—I recognize the fact that rules of branches of trade unions cannot be registered; but it appears to me, from a perusal of the 11th section, that the registration of a union may be considered to cover the registration of its branches so far as it gives the trustees of the branches a legal status. You will observe that the Registrar may, on application from the secretary and members of a branch, direct the transfer of moneys to the trustees of the branch. As I understand, the course is as follows: A registration of a trade union covers all the members who may belong to branches, but the registration only applies to the rules of the union. There is no registration of a branch, but, if action is taken under section 11, it will be incumbent on the branch to prove the connection with the registered union, and the fact that the trustees have been appointed according to rules.—WM. R. E. BROWN, Registrar-General, 24th December, 1878."

To this the Solicitor-General replied as follows:—

"The Registrar-General.—I think that the view put forth in this memorandum is the correct one. Regarding the evidence of the connection of the branch with the union, I think that must be left to specific cases as they arise. The 11th section appears to recognize the trustees of a branch; and if the rules of the union provide as to these, no difficulty will arise in obtaining evidence. In other cases I think no particulars can be laid down.—W. S. REID, 24th December, 1878.”

A doubt next arose as to whether, in the absence of district funds and district trustees, the district could be registered as a single union; but the Registrar decided that this would be no bar. A formal application for registry was then made, but had to be refused in consequence of the union not forwarding specific rules applicable to itself as a New Zealand society, but only rules relating to an English society to which it was affiliated.

In the case of the Dunedin Operative Tailors' Society, the application was not in terms of the regulations, and no subsequent application has been received.

VIII.—THE ANNUAL STATISTICS FOR 1877.

These are the first collected under the provisions of the new Act. They relate only to societies which have furnished returns, the number of which is 105, out of a total of 123 registered societies. These societies fall into two categories—(1) societies having branches, and (2) societies not having branches.

Of the former there were 18 on the register—viz., the following:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows—Auckland District, New Plymouth District, Wellington District, Marlborough District, Nelson District, North Westland District, Hokitika District, North Canterbury District, Lyttelton District, Otago District, Invercargill District; Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand; Ancient Order of Foresters—Auckland District, Wellington District, Nelson District, United Canterbury District, United Otago District; Independent Order of Rechabites—New Zealand Central District.

Of societies not having branches there were on the register 105. Of these, 86 were in reality branches of the societies enumerated in the foregoing list, but, owing to the circumstance that under the Act of 1867 a branch could not be registered as such, they appeared on the register as separate societies. The remaining 19 were, with the exception of 4, branches of societies not on the register, the central body of the society being in some cases within, and in some cases outside the colony.

As the 105 societies described as “not having branches” possess by far the larger proportion of the aggregate funds, the statistics relating to them are more important than those relating to the other category. Eighty-nine of them furnished returns, and the first four tables in Schedule IX. hereto relate exclusively to them. They comprise 51 lodges of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, 1 lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand, 24 courts of the Ancient Order of Foresters, 1 sanctuary of the Ancient Order of Shepherds, 2 tents of the Independent Order of Rechabites, 1 division of the Sons and Daughters of Temperance, 5 branches of the Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, and 4 local societies.

The compilation of these statistics was intrusted to Mr. Frankland, the Actuary to the Department, and the following comments have been furnished by him:—

“From Table I. it will be seen that there were on the 1st January, 1877, in 85 lodges, courts, &c., of the affiliated orders, and 4 small local societies, 8,366 benefit members, and that the number had increased by the 31st December of the same year to 8,560, being an average of 96·2 per club. Amongst the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows the average was 104·4 per lodge; and amongst the Foresters it was 95·3 per court. The corresponding numbers derived from the statistics for 1876 were 77·8 and 86·8 respectively. The largest of the Odd Fellows' lodges, the Loyal Fountain of Friendship, in Auckland, contained 314 benefit members, whilst the smallest, the Loyal Alexandra, in the Waikato, contained 4. Among the Foresters, the courts ranged from Court City of Auckland, with 275 benefit members, down to Court Patea, with 16.

The total number of admissions during 1877 was 1,204, and the total number of exits 1,010. The total number of inward clearances was 109, as against 181 outward clearances. The number of deaths during the year was 72, from a mean number of members of 8,463. This is equivalent to a death rate of 8·5 per 1,000. Among the Odd Fellows the death rate was 7·6 per 1,000; among the Foresters, 11·4; among the Rechabites, 5·4; and in the Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, 6·5. The total number of secessions during the year, including clearances, was 938. By comparing this with the mean number of members, 8,463, we get a rate of secession of 11·1 per cent. From the statistics of 1876 there resulted a rate of 11·8 per cent. These rates are very high as compared with those which obtain in the United Kingdom, where the rate of secession is generally below 5 per cent. per annum. It is also higher than the rates which appear generally to obtain in Victoria. This is a circumstance favourable pro tanto to the financial stability of the societies. As a set-off, however, against this, there were 109 inward clearances, which imply a transfer of liability without a corresponding transfer of funds. Deducting these, we get a rate of secession of 9·8 per cent. Taking the four chief orders represented in the table, the rates of secession were as follow:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, 10·3 per cent.; Ancient Order of Foresters, 12·6 per cent.; Independent Order of Rechabites, 10·7 per cent.; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, 12·7 per cent. The rate of secession in the Independent Order of Rechabites was much heavier according to the statistics of 1876, having amounted to 22·6 per cent.

To 8,560 members on 31st December, 1877, there were, approximately,* 4,800 registered wives—i.e., wives in respect of whom the societies would have been liable for a funeral benefit in the event of death. This amounts to 56·1 per cent. Taking the four orders separately, the percentages are,—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, about 56 per cent.; Ancient Order of Foresters, about 58 per cent.; Independent Order of Rechabites, 30 per cent.; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, 51 per cent. The comparative paucity of registered wives in Rechabite Tents may be accounted for, I believe, by the practice of making the total abstinence pledge a condition of registration. Forty registered wives of members died during the year, this being a mortality of about 8 per 1,000.

* In the case of one or two lodges, the information as to registered wives was not supplied.

Rather more than one-eighth of the members were in receipt of sick-pay at one time or other during the year, and the aggregate number of days' sickness experienced by them, 49,090 (including Sundays), was equivalent to about 45·3 days (or 6 weeks 3·3 days) per member sick, or 5·8 days per member. For the four chief orders the sickness was as follows:—

	Average Age.	Days per Member.	Days per Member, 1876.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ... ..	33·3	6·8	5·5
Ancient Order of Foresters ... ..	31·8	4·0	3·1
Independent Order of Rechabites ... ..	33·1	4·9	8·8
Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society ...	33·2	4·3	3·8

The conclusions which can be drawn from this, taking into account the average age of members, are—(1) that the rate of sickness paid for* in New Zealand friendly societies is, on the whole, low for the earlier ages, as compared with that to be expected according to Ratchliffe's tables, and (2) that it is considerably higher among the Odd Fellows than among the Foresters and the members of the Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society. This probably arises in the main from the circumstance that there are included in the present statistics a number of Odd Fellows' lodges much older than any branches of the other orders, and that therefore, although the average ages in the four orders do not seem to differ much, there is a larger proportion of members at really advanced ages among the Odd Fellows. These questions will, however, be set at rest when the data furnished by the quinquennial returns come to be tabulated.

Turning to Table II., we see that the aggregate funds of these eighty-nine bodies, accumulated to meet the sickness and funeral, and certain other minor liabilities, amounted on 1st January, 1877, to £79,219 12s. 5½d., and that they had increased by the end of the year to £89,337 1s. 6½d.—an increase of £10,117 9s. 1d., or 12·77 per cent. This total of £89,337 1s. 6½d. was distributed as follows:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £64,634 16s. 11½d.; Ancient Order of Foresters (including Shepherds), £18,393 9s. 11d.; New Plymouth Friendly Society, £2,840 4s. 8½d.; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, £1,351 10s. 10½d.; Antidote Division, Sons and Daughters of Temperance, £721 12s. 7d.; Leith Lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand, £662 3s. 9d.; Independent Order of Rechabites, £441 1s. 4d.; Central Volunteer Fire Brigade, £135 6s. 6d.; Kaeo and Whangaroa Friendly Society, £121 16s. 9d.; Primitive Methodist Mutual Aid Society, £34 18s. 2d.

Taking the four chief orders, this gives the following averages:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £1,267 7s. per lodge, or £12 2s. 9d. per member; Ancient Order of Foresters, £766 7s. 11d. per court, or £8 0s. 10d. per member; Independent Order of Rechabites, £220 5s. 8d. per tent, or £2 6s. 5d. per member; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, £270 6s. 2d. per branch, or £4 7s. 2d. per member. These averages are in three cases somewhat higher than the corresponding ones which appear in Table I., because in the latter only the sick and funeral fund itself is considered, whereas here certain minor benefit funds are added on.

The total income of the benefit funds of the societies during 1877 was £21,609 5s. 0½d., of which £19,865 18s. 1½d. was revenue properly so called, while the remaining £1,743 6s. 11½d. represented transactions in which lodges, &c., had acted as agents either for the districts to which they are affiliated, or for other lodges, &c.

The sources from which revenue was derived are to be classified as follows:—

	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Contributions ... ..	11,652	8	8½
Entrance fees ... ..	1,254	18	9
Total premium income ...				12,907	7	5½
Interest on investments ... ..				3,863	0	4
Other sources ... ..				3,095	10	4
Total ... ..				£19,865	18	1½

The other sources include principally an amount of £2,028 19s. 7d., representing the improvement in the value of property belonging to Court Sir George Grey, Ancient Order of Foresters, Wellington. The item "interest on investments" requires somewhat closer examination. It amounts to 4·88 per cent. on the aggregate funds at the commencement of the year, or 4·32 per cent. on the aggregate funds at the end. Computing the percentage according to the formula used by actuaries in such cases, it will be found that the entire funds were invested at an average rate of interest of 4·69 per cent. Comparing this with the amounts for 1876, we have—

	1876.	1877.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ... ..	5·30	4·78
Ancient Order of Foresters ... ..	4·90	3·96
Independent Order of Rechabites ... ..	1·51	Nil
Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society ...	2·02	2·10
All societies ... ..	5·17	4·69

It would not be safe, however, to infer from this that the rate had fallen off among the Odd Fellows and Foresters, as the two columns do not refer to exactly the same individual lodges and courts, the lodges and courts furnishing returns not having been exactly the same in the two years. All we can infer is, that among the Odd Fellows the funds are invested at an average rate of about 5 per cent.; among the Foresters, at from 4 to 5 per cent. There seems, too, to be presumptive evidence for a general falling-off in the rate realized. Among the Rechabites the practice too frequently obtains of crediting all interest to the management fund. The misappropriation which

* The difference in the two rates may be due to an economic rather than a hygienic advantage on the part of New Zealand. There is evidence that many members forbear to claim on the funds when entitled according to the rules to do so, I am collecting further data on the subject.

these returns bring to light occurred, however, before the passing of the Amendment Act, or, indeed, of the principal Act.

The contributions to sick and funeral funds during 1877 amounted to an average of £1.357 (£1 7s. 2d.) per member, or about 7d. per week.* For the four chief orders it was,—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £1.339 (£1 6s. 9d.); Ancient Order of Foresters, £1.470 (£1 9s. 5d.); Independent Order of Rechabites, £1.662 (£1 13s. 3d.); Hibernian Catholic Benefit Society, £1.183 (£1 3s. 8d.) For 1876 the numbers were,—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £1.342 (£1 6s. 10d.); Ancient Order of Foresters, £1.473 (£1 9s. 6d.); Independent Order of Rechabites, £1.511 (£1 10s. 3d.); Hibernian Catholic Benefit Society, £1.156 (£1 3s. 1d.); while the average for all the societies furnishing returns was £1.393 (£1 7s. 10d.) It will thus be seen that the average for the two largest orders has altered very little.

The total sick-pay granted by the eighty-nine lodges, courts, &c., was £5,758 0s. 2d., which represents an average rate of 16s. 5d. per week, and an average total of £5 6s. 3d. per member sick, or 13s. 7d. per member. Taking the four chief orders separately, the averages were as follow :—

	Average Sick-Pay per Member.	Average Pay per Member Sick.	Average Rate per Week.
	s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows	... 15 2	5 18 9	0 15 8

Independent Order of Rechabites	... 14 6	3 13 2	1 0 0†
Hibernian Catholic Benefit Society	... 12 5	4 1 11	1 0 0†

The figures in the first of these columns may be reduced to decimals and compared with the corresponding figures for 1876 :—

	Average Sick-Pay per Member.
	1876.	1877.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows	... 685	758

It seems a legitimate inference from these data that there is at present more sickness among the Odd Fellows of New Zealand than among the Foresters; also that the sickness is on an average more protracted, and a greater proportion of the sick-pay is on a reduced scale. All three facts are fully explainable by the circumstance that there is a larger proportion of old-established branches, and therefore a larger proportion of old members. None of the Foresters' courts furnishing returns was founded earlier than 1860. The following is a table relating to those Odd Fellow lodges founded before this date :—

Name of Lodge.	Mean No. of Members.	No. of Mem- bers Sick.	No. of Days' Sickness.	No. of Days' Sick- ness per Member.
Fountain of Friendship	... 309.5	... 39	... 2,383	... 7.7

Total	... 2,468.5	... 330	... 18,301	... 7.4

This gives an average sickness of 7.4 days per annum, the average for all the lodges being 6.8 days, and that for all the societies taken together being 5.8 days. Again, it gives an average sickness of 55.5 days per member sick; whereas the average per member sick, taking all the societies together, is 45.3 days, and that for all the Odd Fellows' lodges is 53.1 days. This shows that among the older lodges there is a greater total sickness, and also that the sickness experienced is on an average more protracted—results which are exactly in accordance with the predictions of the actuaries.

The point is still further illustrated by the following table :—

	Total Sick-Pay.	Reduced Sick- Pay.	Percentage of Reduced.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows	... 3,990 19 10	582 13 2	14.6

Independent Order of Rechabites	... 135 7 5	Nil	...
Hibernian Catholic Benefit Society	... 192 10 2	Nil	...
All the societies (including local clubs, &c.)	£5,758 0 2	£625 7 4	10.9

* This is about sufficient to provide the ordinary benefits for members entering at the youngest ages. For members entering at the older ages it is utterly insufficient.

† All members sick during year in full benefit, and all at full pay.

‡ The low rate of sickness in these lodges is probably to be attributed to the fact that most of the members are farmers and farm-labourers.

In connection with this table it must be borne in mind, however, that among the Rechabite societies which furnished returns it is the practice not to reduce the sickness allowance until after twelve months' continuous sickness, instead of six months', as in most of the other societies, which may account for the total absence of reduced pay.

£1,347 were paid in funeral benefits, £975 on the death of members, and £372 on the death of members' wives. This represents an average of £18·75 for each member dying, and £10·33 for each wife dying. The levies to district funeral funds exceeded the funeral payments by £168 3s. 1½d. Of the sum of £1,078 3s. 6½d., set down as paid for other benefits, the great bulk was paid by courts of the United Otago District of Foresters, and consisted chiefly of medical expenses. By the Amendment Act of 1878 it is made illegal to defray these expenses from the sick and funeral fund.

The total of the management funds was, on the 1st January, 1877, £8,236 17s. 7½d., and on the 31st December it amounted to £8,514 12s. 8½d. It thus appears that on an average about £1 per member is kept in hand to meet management expenses—at least, that the average tends to reach this amount at the end of a calendar year. The average resulting from the statistics for 1876 is also something less than a pound.

Although it is not necessary or desirable that the management fund of a benefit society should accumulate to any very large amount, it is extremely important that there should always be a sufficient credit balance to meet current expenses. When this is not the case, the practice too frequently obtains of borrowing from the benefit funds to meet the deficiency, although, of course, the true remedy would be found in a special levy. It is therefore a matter of regret that amongst the eighty-nine lodges, courts, &c., included in these tables, the management funds of no less than twenty-three were without any credit balance on the 31st December, 1877. These facts doubtless represent a large indebtedness to the sick and funeral funds. The exact amount of the indebtedness it is impossible to ascertain from the returns,* but it will be seen that £592 12s. 11½d. were borrowed from the sick and funeral funds during the year, and that the repayments amounted in the aggregate to £658 16s. 7d. There has thus been on the whole a reduction of the indebtedness, and it is to be hoped that the provisions of the Amendment Act, by rendering any increase of the debt definitively illegal, will have the effect of soon extinguishing it altogether among registered societies.

The total expenses of management amounted to £5,691 15s. 8d., or £6·73 (13s. 5d.) per member. In 1876 they amounted to on an average £6·46 (12s. 11d.) among the societies then furnishing returns. Taking the four chief orders separately we have the following results:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £710 (14s. 2d.) per member; Ancient Order of Foresters, £556 (11s. 2d.) per member; Independent Order of Rechabites, £614 (12s. 3d.) per member; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, £816 (16s. 4d.) per member.

These results point to the same conclusion as the corresponding results obtained from the statistics for 1876. The sets of results are not strictly comparable, because the expenses of management were differently estimated in the two cases. With this caution, the results for 1876 may be presented:—Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, £783 (15s. 8d.) per member; Ancient Order of Foresters, £614 (12s. 3d.) per member; Independent Order of Rechabites, £687 (13s. 9d.) per member; Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society, £935 (18s. 8d.) per member.

The conclusion pointed at is, that the Hibernian Society is more costly in its management than any of the other orders, and that the Foresters' clubs are on an average conducted more cheaply in this colony than those of the Odd Fellows. The view given of the Rechabite societies is a favourable one; but the number of tents furnishing returns was in both instances so small that no general conclusion can be drawn from the facts. It may be interesting to note that the management expenses of the New Plymouth Friendly Society, the leading representative of the isolated societies, were, in 1876, £433 (8s. 8d.) per head, and in 1877, £706 (14s. 1d.) per head; in the former case considerably below, but in the latter somewhat above, the general average for the same year.

The total cost of medical attendance, &c., in the societies furnishing returns was £7,431 11s. 6d., or £8·78 (17s. 7d.) per head. Of this, £6,605 10s. 5½d. was paid from management funds, and £826 1s. 0½d. (by courts of the United Otago District of Foresters) from sick and funeral funds. The medical expenses per head in the four chief orders were as follow, in the years 1876 and 1877:—

	1876.	1877.
Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows	0·833	0·831
Ancient Order of Foresters	0·957	1·004
Independent Order of Rechabites	0·742	0·676
Hibernian Australasian Catholic Benefit Society	1·230	1·119

Turning, lastly, to the assets of the societies, we find that these may be arranged in the following order of comparative magnitude:—Mortgages on freehold property, £35,933 15s. 8d.; land and buildings, £34,048 14s. 0½d.; deposits in banks at interest, £10,794 3s. 4d.; current accounts in banks, £5,581 18s. 0½d.; deposits in Post Office Savings Bank, £5,257 18s. 11d.; shares in building societies, &c., £1,527 14s. 2d.; cash in hand, £1,320 10s. 8½d.; deposits in private savings banks, £1,206 0s. 6d.; Government securities, £1,160; loans to members, £604 18s. 10d.; whilst miscellaneous debts and other assets amount to £4,771 9s. 1d.

To complete the view of the financial condition of these societies, tables are appended relating to the funds (funeral and management) which are under the control of central bodies. It will be seen that, with the exception of the Auckland District of the Manchester Unity, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Zealand, and the New Zealand Central District of Rechabites, there is no district which allows its funeral fund to accumulate to any large amount; the bulk of the moneys destined to meet funeral liabilities are in the hands of the branches. In the first and third of those mentioned it amounted to £2·093 (£2 1s. 10d.) and £1·033 (£1 0s. 8d.) per head."

SCHEDULE III.

AN ACT to amend "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877." [29th October, 1878.]

BE IT ENACTED by the General Assembly of New Zealand in Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

1. The Short Title of this Act shall be "The Friendly Societies Act Amendment Act, 1878."

2. So much of subsection three of section twelve of "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877" (herein referred to as "the said Act"), as requires that amendments of rules shall be published in the Gazette, is hereby repealed.

3. In subsection one of section twelve of the said Act the words "and so far as they are applicable to the constitution of such society" shall be inserted between the word "registered" and the word "contain;" in subsection two of the same section there shall be inserted between the word "management" and the word "and" the words "medical and surgical expenses, including medicine and medical and surgical requisites;" and the said Act shall be read and construed accordingly.

4. Section thirteen, subsection one, of the said Act shall be read as if after the word "appointed" at the end of sub-head (d) there were inserted the words "also a list of the members of the society, together with the age of each, and the periods of sickness, deaths, and other contingencies in respect of which benefits are given by the society, experienced by the society during the year ending as aforesaid, specifying the members in respect of whom such sickness, deaths, or contingencies have been experienced, and such other information as the Registrar may from time to time prescribe. The Registrar may dispense with the quinquennial return from any society furnishing the required information annually."

5. Sub-head (f) of subsection one of section thirteen of the said Act is hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof it is enacted that—

Every registered society shall, once at least in the five years next after the commencement of the said Act or the registry of the society, and so again within six months after the expiration of every five years succeeding the date of the first valuation under this Act, either cause its assets and liabilities to be valued by a valuer, to be appointed by the society and approved of by the Governor, and send to the Registrar a report, signed by such valuer (and which shall also state his address and calling or profession), on the condition of the society, and an abstract to be made by him of the results of his valuation, together with a return containing such information with respect to the benefits assured and contributions receivable by the society, and of its funds and effects, debts and credits, as the Registrar may from time to time require; or send to the Registrar a return of the benefits assured and contributions receivable from all the members of the society, and of all its funds and effects, debts and credits, accompanied by such evidence in support thereof as the Registrar may prescribe, in which case the Registrar shall cause the assets and liabilities of the society to be valued and reported on by some actuary, and shall send to the society a copy of his report and an abstract of the results of his valuation.

6. The provisions of section twenty-nine of the said Act shall be and be deemed to have applied to all registered and unregistered societies and branches.

7. The following subsections shall be read and construed as part of section thirteen of the said Act, and as if they were subsections thereto, occurring immediately before subsection two of that section:—

- (1.) In all registered societies and branches all moneys received or paid on account of each particular fund shall be kept separate and distinct, and shall be entered in a separate account distinct from the moneys received and paid on account of any other fund, and a separate fund or funds shall be established for the payment of all expenses of management, and of all expenses (if any) on account of medical and surgical attendance, including medicine and medical and surgical requisites.
- (2.) No transfer shall be made of the moneys of any one benefit fund to meet the liabilities of any other fund, nor shall such moneys, or interest accruing therefrom, be in any manner applied for the use, whether temporary or permanent, of any fund save the fund to which they properly belong.

If any valuer, in any report made in accordance with section five of this Act, shall report that such transfer can be safely made, it shall be lawful to make such transfer accordingly.

8. Sub-heads (g), (h), and (i), of subsection one of section thirteen of the said Act, shall not apply to working-men's clubs.

9. The provision (d) of section twenty-two of the said Act is hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof the following provision is enacted:—

The provisions of section twenty-two of the said Act relating to change of name shall apply to all registered branches, and the provisions of that section relating to amalgamation and transfer of engagements shall apply and extend to registered branches of the same society; but no change of name, amalgamation or transfer of engagements shall take place in such cases unless in accordance with the general rules of the society to which such branches belong, or the consent of the central body of such society is obtained thereto.

Except as aforesaid the provisions of section twenty-two shall not apply to branches.

10. In all informations and complaints under the said Act or this Act made by or on behalf of the Registrar against a society or branch, or any officer thereof, or member of the committee of management thereof respectively, the onus of proving that any return, report, notice, or document required to be sent or given to the Registrar has been so sent or given, or that any return, report, notice, or document has been compiled or made as required by the said Act or this Act, shall lie with the society, branch, officer, or member against which or whom the information or complaint is laid or made.

11. The said Act and this Act shall in all respects be construed as one Act.

12. No rule or amendment of a society or branch shall be disentitled to registry by reason of its expressing or implying any subordination to the central body of the same order outside New Zealand, or by reason of its containing any reference to one or more of the general laws of the said order: Provided that such general laws shall be or have been forwarded to the Registrar by such society or branch.

If provision is made in such general laws for any of the matters specified in the Second Schedule to the said Act, the society shall be deemed to have sufficiently complied with subsection one of section twelve of the said Act if reference be made in the rules of the society to the general law or laws making such provision: Provided that nothing herein contained shall have the effect of giving force to any general law that is contrary to any of the express provisions of this or the said Act.

SCHEDULE V.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE INFORMATION AND GUIDANCE OF FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

THE attention of members of friendly societies is directed to the provisions of "The Friendly Societies Act Amendment Act, 1878."

The second section of the Act, by repealing that portion of the Act of 1877 which provided that amendments of rules must be gazetted before they became valid, enables the Registrar to receive as amendments of rules a complete set of new rules. It will, however, be gathered from the new Regulations made after the passing of this Act that an application to register a complete set of new rules must be made in a form similar to that for an original registration, as it is still required that the amended rules shall provide for the matters specified in Schedule II. to the Act of 1877.

It is open to any society, in terms of section 12 of the Amendment Act, if the general laws of the order to which the society belongs make provision for any of the matters specified in the said Schedule, to refer in their rules to the said general laws instead of making special provision in respect thereof by rules; but it will, in that case, be necessary that the rules should specially refer to the general law making the requisite provision, as in the following example:—

Rule No. —. The conditions under which a branch may secede from the society are provided for by General Law No. —.

In making an application for the registry of a set of rules the number of the rule which refers to the general law must be quoted in the application—not the general law itself. For the general laws of an order (the central body of which is outside New Zealand) are not, as such, registrable; but if a rule refers to any general law, the general law so referred to can be read as explanatory of the rule. Hence, if the rules omit all reference to the general laws that make provision for the matters specified in Schedule II., and if there is no other provision for these matters in the rules, the rules cannot be said to contain any direct registrable provision for such matters, and would therefore not be in compliance with the Act; for the form of application required by the Regulations is only a method of procedure, and could not be deemed registrable as part of the rules, so as to be explanatory of them in a Court of law.

* If the society is not a friendly society, or a cattle insurance society, this and the remaining numbered statements should be omitted; or, if it be a specially-authorized society, any of them which are not rendered applicable by the authority for registering the society should be omitted.

† If the society does not grant a medical-attendance benefit, the words in brackets should be omitted.

‡ If the society is a cattle insurance society, this and the next statement should be omitted.

§ If the number of members is limited to be less than 1,000, or less than 10,000, members, the bracketed words relating to both, or the latter, of such cases should be omitted.

|| If this is not intended, this statement should be omitted.

¶ If the society is not one to which section 31 applies, this statement should be omitted.

** If the society does not grant annuities, these words should be omitted.

The third section of the Act requires that rules submitted for registry shall make special provision for defraying medical and surgical expenses (including medicine and medical and surgical requisites) either from entirely separate contributions or from the contributions to the management fund. The scale of the weekly or monthly contributions is based, or ought to be based, primarily upon actuarial calculations of the amounts which must be paid by members entering at different ages to secure to them the sick and funeral benefits promised them by the rules. The data as to sickness and mortality are sufficiently precise to enable actuaries to ascertain what contributions at each age are on an average required to secure the payment of these benefits, provided that the contributions and all interest accruing therefrom are regularly and closely invested at a certain minimum rate of interest. But it is impossible to estimate accurately the future liabilities in respect of the medical-attendance benefit. The expenses connected with this benefit are so much dependent on locality, density of population, the measure of travelling involved, and other variable circumstances, that actuaries are unable to compute any uniform contribution in respect thereof. Hence in their tables of contributions no allowance whatever is made for expenses of this nature. It is therefore incumbent on societies to make special contributions for these expenses, or else to defray them from the management fund, since, if they are paid from the sick and funeral fund, the latter will be reduced below the amount required to enable it to meet all the probable future demands that will be made upon it.

The fourth section provides that the information which the Act of 1877 requires to be furnished to the Registrar quinquennially shall, for the future, be furnished annually. The collection of accurate data respecting sickness and mortality is of the greatest importance in the interests of the societies themselves, as it will render possible the preparation of tables of contributions more perfectly adjusted to the benefits promised, and also the more accurate valuation of the contracts entered upon. The imperfect manner in which the books have been kept, and the frequent changes among secretaries, have prevented a considerable number of societies from furnishing complete quinquennial returns. The system of rendering the sickness and mortality return annually will probably require less labour on the part of secretaries than the present system, and the returns will almost certainly be far more complete and reliable.

The fifth section provides that the valuation report and the return required in connection therewith shall be forwarded to the Registrar by the society instead of by the person employed to make the valuation; and, also, that the Registrar may appoint an actuary to value the society, if the society should not appoint one itself. It was considered by some that the Act of 1877, in requiring the valuer to send to the Registrar a return containing certain information with respect to benefits, contributions, funds, effects, debts, and credits, might be deemed to impose upon the former the duty of a personal examination of the books of the society. This interpretation, if sustained, would no doubt have largely increased the cost of valuations, as the duties of a valuer are entirely distinct from those of an auditor, and a correct valuation can very well be made at a distance from the society's office upon the supply of certain specified data to the valuer by the society. The section under consideration removes all possible doubt on this matter, and clearly prescribes that the society shall forward the valuer's report, duly signed by him, to the Registrar, together with the return which was required by the Act of 1877 to be sent by the valuer. Should a society either neglect to appoint or not desire to appoint a valuer within the term prescribed by the Act, it is required by this section to forward to the Registrar such information as he may deem requisite for effecting a valuation, and the responsibility of appointing a valuer for the society is then thrown upon the Registrar.

The seventh section provides that, in registered societies, a separate fund or funds shall be kept for the payment of management and medical expenses, and that this fund or funds shall be kept entirely distinct from the remaining funds of the society. It also forbids the appropriation of any portion of a benefit fund to any purpose other than the purposes for which the fund was established. The principal distinction between this and the third section is that the latter requires certain provisions with respect to the distinctness of funds to be made in every set of rules submitted for registration, whereas the former places certain closely-allied provisions in the light of a positive enactment, the breach of which will constitute an offence under the Act, in terms of section 13, (3), (a) and (b), of the Act of 1877, and will entail prosecution.

It should be understood that this provision contemplates something more than an arbitrary allocation of the contributions to the various funds by the managing committee. The section under consideration requires that the sums received or paid on account of a particular fund shall be kept separate, and therefore contributions received on account of certain specified benefits, such as sick or funeral benefits, may not, even in part, be carried to or distributed between any remaining funds of the society, such as the management or the medical expenses fund. It is therefore incumbent on societies to fix in their rules the scale of contributions to be paid for the benefits properly so called (the scales recommended by actuaries will assist them on this point), and to make such provision, altogether distinct from this, as they may think fit for the payment of management and medical expenses.

Any society which receives in one sum a contribution to meet the sick and funeral liabilities and also the expenses of management and medical attendance, without its being stated in the rules what portions of this contribution shall be appropriated to each of these two main purposes, should at once frame a rule defining the amount which is to be allocated to the sick and funeral benefits and the amount which is to be allocated to the management and medical expenses. Each portion of the total amount so required to be allocated to a particular fund will then be the amount "received on account of that fund," in terms of the section under consideration. This amount will have to be placed at once to the credit of the particular fund in question, and, if the fund be a benefit fund, must not be used, whether temporarily or otherwise (save on the authority of a valuation report made in terms of the Act), for any purpose whatever other than the purpose or purposes for which the fund is established.

If it has been the practice to defray the expenses connected with medicine and medical attendance from the sick and funeral fund, this practice must be at once discontinued, and a rule should be framed establishing separate contributions for that purpose, or else increasing the contributions for management to such an extent as to allow of the payment of medical expenses from the management fund.

There is an absolute prohibition (except upon the report of a valuer after a quinquennial valuation) from using any portion of the sick and funeral fund to meet the liabilities in respect of management, medicine, or medical attendance. It will be observed that this prohibition extends to the interest accruing to a benefit fund, and consequently any rule permitting the appropriation to management expenses of the interest, or of any portion thereof, earned by the sick and funeral fund, will henceforth be of no effect, and the continuance of the practice so permitted will entail prosecution.

As an illustration of the evil effects of defraying medical expenses from the sick and funeral fund, the following facts are commended to the attention of friendly societies generally:—

In a certain society, registered under the Friendly Societies Acts of this colony, the contributions to the sick and funeral funds of the branches are such that, in the present state of our knowledge respecting sickness and mortality, it cannot be pronounced certain that they will prove permanently sufficient to meet the sick and funeral benefits alone, on the assumption of an average experience. The probability is that, if sufficient, they will be found barely sufficient for that purpose. Yet the premium income so accruing, which should accumulate to meet the sick and funeral liabilities alone, is subjected to a tax of from 50 to 60 per cent. annually to meet the expenses connected with medical attendance. It is evident, therefore, that the funds cannot long bear the strain of this additional charge. If the present system were continued the bankruptcy of all the branches of this society would be inevitable. As a matter of fact, the benefit funds of some of them are at a very low ebb. This will be evident from the following figures, which represent the condition of five of the branches as at 30th June, 1878:—

	Established.	No. of Members.	Benefit Funds.			Benefit Funds per Member.
			£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Branch No. 1 ...	1864	131	30	1	0	0	4	7
„ No. 2 ...	1864	28	28	1	7	1	0	0 $\frac{3}{4}$
„ No. 3 ...	1865	87	115	15	10 $\frac{3}{4}$	1	6	7 $\frac{1}{2}$
„ No. 4 ...	1868	41	16	8	7 $\frac{1}{2}$	0	8	0 $\frac{1}{2}$
„ No. 5 ...	1869	32	31	0	5 $\frac{1}{2}$	0	19	5

The average amount of funds per member shown in the above table is exceptionally low as compared with the generality of societies established at about the same date, and granting similar benefits. The average amount of the benefit funds per member at the end of the year 1876 was as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
In 75 lodges of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows ...	9	8	4 $\frac{1}{2}$
In 42 courts of the Ancient Order of Foresters ...	4	17	4 $\frac{3}{4}$
In 140 societies, chiefly branches of the two above-mentioned orders...	7	5	5 $\frac{1}{2}$

As these are not, on an average, much older than the five branches enumerated in the former table, and as the sick and funeral benefits granted by them are in the majority of cases nearly alike, while the total liability of the benefit fund would be very much greater in the five branches (owing to the extra charge for medical expenses) should the present system be continued, the perilous position of these five branches is at once apparent.

Two other branches of the same society have recently broken up, and the Registrar has been informed that the dissolution was owing to lack of funds.

Although, theoretically, it would be possible to defray medical expenses from the same fund as sick and funeral benefits, by means of a heavy loading to the subscriptions to that fund, yet, in the case of a society not under the permanent direction of an actuary, it is highly dangerous to attempt to provide for expenses of this kind in such a manner. The subscriptions which are designed to meet liabilities (such as sickness and funeral liabilities) the present value of which admits of definite actuarial computation, should be kept separate from those which are designed to meet expenses of a different kind—expenses in respect to which each year should be made to wipe off its own liabilities. Consequently the expenses connected with medical attendance should either be defrayed from an entirely separate fund, or else from the management fund.

9th November, 1878.

WM. R. E. BROWN,
Registrar of Friendly Societies.

- (2.) Having possession of any of its property, withholds or misapplies it;
- (3.) Wilfully applies any part of such property to purposes other than those expressed or directed by the rules, and authorized by the Act;

the penalty for either of these offences being a fine not exceeding £50 and costs, and, in default of payment, imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding six months.

4. The treasurer and other officers of the society, or persons acting in such capacity, are constituted servants of the trustees within the meaning of "The Larceny Act, 1867," and in cases of larceny and embezzlement can be proceeded against as in the case of larceny or embezzlement by a clerk or servant.

5. If an officer of the society dies, or becomes bankrupt or insolvent, or if an execution is issued against him whilst he has money or property of the society in his possession by virtue of his office, the trustees of the society are entitled to claim such money or property in preference to any other creditor.

6. If the society has funds, debentures, securities, or moneys in the names of trustees, and a trustee is absent from New Zealand, becomes bankrupt, compounds with his creditors, becomes a lunatic, dies, or has been removed from his office of trustee, or if it is unknown whether he is alive or dead, a registered society, instead of having to apply to the Supreme Court, or to take any other proceedings which it would have to take if unregistered, can have such funds, debentures, &c., transferred by direction of the Registrar, on payment of a fee of £1.

7. The documents of the society are, for the most part, free from stamp duty; and no customs duty is chargeable on the regalia, &c., of a registered society.

8. The society can admit members under twenty-one (but above sixteen), and take binding receipts from them, which would otherwise be of no effect.

9. To a registered friendly society a certificate of the birth or death of a member, or of any other person insured or to be insured with it, costs only 1s.

10. If a registered society invests money on mortgage, such mortgages can be discharged by a mere indorsed receipt, without reconveyance.

11. A registered society has the advantage of depositing money to any amount at interest in the Post Office Savings Bank in the names of the trustees as such—a privilege denied to unregistered societies, as deposits by their trustees can only be received as the deposits of the individuals, and are subject to the ordinary limitation as to amounts at interest, the society not being recognized by the authorities.

12. Its officers are legally bound to render account, and give up all money or property in their possession, on demand or notice, and may be compelled by order of a Resident Magistrate's Court to do so.

13. Disputes may be legally settled according to the societies' own rules; or, if no decision is made within forty days after a decision is applied for, by a Resident Magistrate's Court; or, if both parties desire it, and the rules do not forbid, by the Registrar of Friendly Societies.

14. Members of registered friendly societies have the privilege of legally insuring money, on the deaths of their wives and children, for their funeral expenses, without having an insurable interest in their lives. (Such insurances are void by Act of the Imperial Parliament, if effected with an unregistered society.)

15. Members of registered societies may (unless in benevolent societies or working-men's clubs) dispose at death of sums payable by the society not exceeding £50, by written nomination, without a will; and this nomination may be made by youths or girls of sixteen, who cannot make a will until they are twenty-one.

16. Where there is no will and no nomination, the trustees may distribute sums under £50 without letters of administration being taken out. (A person who should do so in any other case would make himself liable for the debts of the deceased.)

17. The society is entitled, without being in anywise compelled to do so, to call in the services of public auditors for the auditing of its accounts, and of public valuers for the valuation of its assets and liabilities, at fixed rates of fees on a much lower scale than the ordinary professional charges.

18. The rules and other important documents relating to it are placed on record in a public office, from whence authentic copies can be obtained, which are evidence in a Court of justice.

SCHEDULE VI.

INTRODUCTORY OBSERVATIONS ON THE TABLE OF RATES OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

THE object of every friendly society being to provide, amongst other things, by periodical contributions from all its members, for the payment of sums of money in sickness, old age, or at death, it is evidently of the utmost importance that these contributions should be of such magnitude that, when improved at interest, they will be sufficient to enable the society to pay the said sums of money as they from time to time become due. The consequence of their being below this standard will evidently be that, although the members who claim on the funds during the earlier stages of the society's existence will receive during these stages the benefits to which they may be entitled, they will, in so doing, prevent the funds of the society from accumulating with sufficient rapidity to meet all its ulterior engagements. During the process of meeting these latter engagements the funds will therefore be exhausted; and a number of claimants will be unable to obtain the benefits for which they have contracted, and in the hope of obtaining which they may have been paying contributions for a long series of years. In other words, those who are healthy and long-lived will be simply paying their contributions to help those who are sickly in the earlier stages of the society's existence, without much prospect of receiving any benefits themselves when at length they want them.

The disaster above referred to is not merely one which abstract reasoning enables us to anticipate, but it is one which has actually occurred in numberless instances, and under the most aggravated circumstances of suffering and distress, in the experience of the mother-country. An instructive passage on this subject is to be found in the "Manual for Patrons and Members of Friendly Societies," by Mr. Charles Hardwick, Past Grand Master of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows. Mr. Hardwick writes as follows:—*

"It is notorious that lodges belonging to the affiliated orders or secret societies, as well as ordinary sick-clubs, have been compelled to reduce the amount of their sick-pay and funeral allowance, simply because the demands had augmented to such an extent that the most illiterate of the members could no longer conceal from themselves the gradual but rapid absorption of their reserved capital. Other branches or clubs have broken up, and divided amongst the disappointed members the remnant of their once seemingly-heavy accumulated fund. Many old and deserving men, who through the best portion of their lives subscribed to such societies, have been thrown into the parish workhouse, or compelled to subsist upon the charity of friends or relatives, because the institution which had fed their provident hopes had crumbled beneath their feet at the very moment when they expected to reap the fruits of their commendable forethought. These are by no means uncommon occurrences, but matters of every-day experience."

* "Manual for Patrons and Members of Friendly Societies," p. 49, Second Edition.

It is for the purpose of averting disasters of this nature that the accompanying table has been prepared, and is now recommended for adoption.

The actuarial calculations on which it is based have been made by Messrs. G. Leslie and P. Black, of Dunedin, members of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, and Public Valuers under "The Friendly Societies Act, 1877," and have been checked by Mr. F. W. Frankland, the actuary attached to the office of the Registrar of Friendly Societies. The data as to sickness and mortality, &c., and the mode of dealing with them, have been decided on only after consultation with eminent actuaries both in Great Britain and in Australia.

The method of using the table is illustrated in the following examples:—

Example 1.—A society grants an allowance of £1 per week during sickness not continuing over more than six months; if a member remain on the sick-list for more than six months the allowance is reduced to 10s. per week; and if for more than twelve months, to 5s. per week. At the death of a member, his representatives are entitled to a funeral benefit of £20; and at the death of a member's first wife, if the member be still living, he is entitled to a funeral benefit of £10. Required, the annual contribution to the sick and funeral fund which should be paid by a member entering at age 20.

The contribution for an allowance of £1 per week during the first six months of sickness is seen from the table to be £1 0s. 8d. That for an allowance of 10s. per week during the second six months of sickness, being, of course, one-half of the amount required for an allowance of £1 per week during the same period, is one-half of 3s. 4d., or 1s. 8d. Similarly, the contribution required for an allowance of 5s. per week during the remaining period of sickness is one-quarter of 9s., or 2s. 3d. Again, the contribution required for a funeral benefit of £20 at the death of a member is double of 2s. 8d., or 5s. 4d., while that for a benefit of £10 at the death of a member's first wife is obtained directly from the table as 1s. 10d. Hence the total annual contribution to the sick and funeral fund will have to be £1 11s. 9d., as may be shown thus:—

Annual contribution for allowance of £1 per week during first six months of sickness	1	0	8
Annual contribution for allowance of 10s. per week during second six months of sickness—one half of 3s. 4d.	0	1	8
Annual contribution for allowance of 5s. per week during remainder of sickness—one quarter of 9s.	0	2	3
Annual contribution for allowance of £20 at death of member—double 2s. 8d.	0	5	4
Annual contribution for allowance of £10 at death of member's first wife	0	1	10
Total annual contribution to sick and funeral fund...	£1	11	9

From this it follows that the weekly subscriptions for the above scale of benefits should be about 7½d. for members entering at age 20.

Example 2.—A society grants an allowance of 15s. per week during the first twelve months of sickness, after which the allowance is reduced to 7s. 6d. per week. The funeral benefit at the death of a member is £12, and at the death of a member's first wife, £7 10s. Required, the weekly subscription to the sick and funeral fund which should be paid by a member entering at age 40:—

	£	s.	d.
For allowance of 15s. per week in first twelve months of sickness—three-quarters of £2 1s. 4d.	1	11	0
For allowance of 7s. 6d. per week in remainder of sickness—three-eighths of £1 6s. 3d.	0	9	10
For allowance of £12 at death of member—twelve-tenths of 5s. 2d.	0	6	2½
For allowance of £7 10s. at death of member's first wife—three-quarters of 3s. 4d.	0	2	6
Total annual contribution to sick and funeral fund...	£2	9	6½
Total weekly contribution to sick and funeral fund...	£0	0	11½

Example 3.—A society grants an allowance of £1 per week during the whole period of sickness, a funeral benefit of £20 at the death of a member, and one of £15 at the death of a member's wife. Required, the weekly subscription to the sick and funeral fund which should be paid by a member entering at age 46:—

	£	s.	d.
For allowance of £1 per week during sickness	4	8	5
For allowance of £20 at death of member—double of 6s. 6d.	0	13	0
For allowance of £15 at death of member's first wife—three-halves of 4s. 1d.	0	6	1½
Total annual contribution to sick and funeral fund	£5	7	6½
Total weekly contribution to sick and funeral fund	£0	2	1

From the above examples it is abundantly evident that the subscriptions usually paid by members of friendly societies in this country are utterly inadequate to provide the benefits promised. In a large proportion of cases the subscription to the sick and funeral fund is a uniform one for all ages, and actually smaller in amount than what should be paid by members entering at the youngest ages. An attempt is sometimes made to remedy the insufficiency of the contributions, and also, and more especially, the injustice of a uniform contribution, by a scale of initiation fees graduated according to age. How utterly inadequate these initiation fees are as a supplement to the contributions usually charged will be clear on its being pointed out that even an entrance fee of £5 is only equivalent to the following annual contribution, payable by weekly or monthly contributions :—

5s. 4d. for a member entering at age 20.

5s. 10d. for a member entering at age 30.

6s. 7d. for a member entering at age 40.

Whereas for a scale of benefits specified in Example 1, given above, the annual contribution required for a member entering at age 40 would be £2 17s. 6d., being, it will be seen, £1 5s. 9d. in excess of the annual contributions required for the same benefits for a member entering at age 20.

Again, in order to make up for the difference in the contributions necessary at ages 20 and 40 respectively to secure an allowance of £1 per week during sickness, an initiation fee of £26 2s. 10d. would be required at the latter age. It is therefore evident that the excess of payment to be required from members entering at the higher ages cannot practically be provided for by an ascending scale of initiation fees, and it is consequently indispensable that the periodical contributions should be graduated according to age.

Societies charging a uniform contribution, or a contribution which, although graduated according to age, is at a lower rate than that set forth in the subjoined table, are earnestly advised to reconsider their position, and to reflect on the disastrous consequences which are almost certain to result from the perpetuation of a scale of charges much lower than the scale which actuaries are unanimous in regarding as the lowest which can be adopted with safety. The fact that the funds of a society have been steadily accumulating since the time of its establishment is no guarantee against the approach of bankruptcy at no distant date, since, from the nature of the risks undertaken, it is evident that the heaviest liabilities must usually be long deferred. It is not, however, sufficient that the rate of contributions to the benefit funds of a society should come up to a certain standard. There are certain other conditions indispensable to the stability of societies, without the observance of which the rate recommended would be inapplicable, and some of which it is proposed here to enumerate. The first of these is, that the number of members subscribing to a particular sick (or funeral) fund must not be very small, as otherwise the sickness and mortality experienced will probably be very different from that average sickness and mortality which are assumed in the table. The amount of sickness and the length of life to be experienced by any particular individual are proverbially matters of the greatest uncertainty, and it is only when a large number of individuals are combined that the rate of sickness and mortality to be experienced can be predicted with any approach to accuracy. It is impossible to draw a definite line of demarkation between societies which are and those which are not sufficiently large to afford a fair basis for the operation of average; but it may be laid down, without hesitation, that where either the sickness or the mortality risk is spread over a smaller number of persons than one hundred, there can be no safety in the rate of contributions here recommended. A second and even more imperative condition of stability is, that the contributions to the sick and funeral fund shall be closely invested at compound interest at a minimum rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and that neither the accumulated contributions themselves, nor the interest accruing therefrom, shall ever be appropriated, on any pretext, to any purpose whatever save the payment of the particular sick and funeral benefits for which the fund is established, except on its being ascertained by a duly-qualified valuer that a definite surplus exists, and on its partial or total appropriation to other purposes being authorized by him. The table is calculated on the assumption that a rate of interest of 4 per cent. per annum is constantly being realized on the accumulated capital, and that neither capital nor interest is ever used for any other purpose but the payment of the benefits specified at the head of the several columns. No allowance is made in it for management or medical expenses, and these must therefore be defrayed from an entirely separate fund. It is evident that, if these conditions are disregarded, and if the society has an average sickness and mortality experience, and does not make any exceptional profits from other sources, the sick and funeral fund cannot accumulate with sufficient rapidity to enable the ulterior liabilities to be met. A third condition is, that there should not be an unusual proportion of members residing in an unhealthy locality, or engaged in any occupation more than ordinarily unhealthy or hazardous. The fourth and last to be here mentioned is, that there should be a periodical investigation into the affairs of the society by a duly-qualified valuer, and, if necessary, an adjustment of the rates of contribution or of the scale of benefits in accordance with his recommendations. Without an actuarial investigation of this kind it is impossible for any society to ascertain whether its capital in hand is sufficient, together with the future contributions expected to be received, to meet the future liabilities. Even with the most carefully-graduated scale of subscriptions, and with the best management, a society is always in danger of drifting into an unsound financial condition, owing to fluctuations or irregularities in its experience. There are many causes which may produce a difference between the actual and the anticipated experience of a society. The principal are the following :— (1.) The partial imperfection of the data as to sickness and mortality (especially at the highest ages) on which the rates of contribution are founded. (2.) The preponderance amongst the occupations in which the members are engaged of some particular trade or calling which may be exceptionally healthy or unhealthy, or which may have the effect of making very slight injuries seriously inconvenient, and of thus causing the members who follow it to claim very often on the funds. (3.) The exceptional salubrity or unhealthiness of the locality in which the majority of the members reside. (4.) Differences in the rules and in the practice regulating the dispensations of sick benefits and funeral allowances, the practice of some societies being much more stringent in this respect than that of others. (5.) Some general and widespread change in the value of life and the liability to sickness. On these various grounds, it is absolutely essential to the safety of every friendly society, as of every life insurance office, that it should undergo, periodically, an actuarial investigation into its affairs. A quinquennial valuation is rendered obligatory by the Act on all registered societies, but unregistered societies are earnestly counselled to adopt the same practice, and all are alike urged to call in early the assistance of competent valuers, in order that their financial position may be at once determined, and that any deficiencies which may disclose themselves may be remedied before they assume proportions of a too formidable nature.

In conclusion, it is to be remarked that the table herewith is only recommended provisionally. The data as to sickness and mortality hitherto collected are in several respects imperfect, and, in the event of a wider knowledge being acquired on this subject, the table will be liable to be superseded by one more accurately adjusted to the benefits promised. It is also to be hoped that an improvement will take place in several respects in the nature of the benefits themselves. In particular, it is to be hoped that the allowances in old age will be made no longer contingent on sickness, but that they will assume the form of a certain and permanent annuity. A superannuation of this kind would be a benefit of a much more satisfactory nature than an allowance contingent on sickness at an age when the line of demarkation between health and disease is rarely very distinct. Moreover, since the data as to sickness in extreme old age are too scanty and divergent to merit much reliance, and since the value of a certain annuity depends only on the rate of mortality (the rate of interest being given), the liabilities of a society would be rendered capable of very much more precise computation by the introduction of the annuity system. Should any society show signs of desiring to effect a reform in this direction a series of tables will be issued from this office suited to the class of benefits in question.

INSTRUCTIONS.

Particulars to be entered.

1. This form is to be filled up and returned to the Registrar of Friendly Societies, Wellington, on or before the 1st day of April next. No entry need be made of any members except such as have, during the year, either received sick-pay or other benefits, died, or otherwise left the , or married (if thereby entitled to a funeral benefit in event of wife's death), or whose wives have died during the year.

Year of Birth.

2. It is to be borne in mind that a card containing particulars respecting each individual member will be kept in the office of the Registrar of Friendly Societies (the information to be used hereafter for actuarial purposes), and that the cards will be arranged together in order according to the year of birth of the member they represent. It is therefore necessary that great care should be taken to make the information in column 2 accurate.

Sickness.

3. The names of all members who were sick during any portion of the year are to be entered first in column 1, the period of sickness at each rate of sick-pay being entered in column 3, the rate in column 4, the amount of sick-pay in column 5, and the number of attacks of sickness during the year in column 6. If a member has received sick-pay at more than one rate, an extra line is to be taken for each rate, but the name is to be entered once only.

Registered Wives.

4. The names of all members who married during the year (if thereby entitled to a funeral benefit in event of wife's death), and of all members, if any, who, though married, were not before entitled to the said benefit, but who during the year, by registration of their wives or otherwise, became so entitled, are to be entered next in column 1. The letter R is, in both cases, to be inserted opposite their names in column 7, and the year of the wife's birth in column 8.

Deaths.

5. The names of members who died or whose wives died during the year are to be entered next in column 1, the date of death being placed in column 9, the cause in column 10, and where the entry refers to the death of a wife, the letter W in column 12.

Members Leaving.

6. The names of members leaving from any other cause than death are to be placed last in column 1, the date of leaving being entered in column 9, and the cause in column 11.

Column to be added.

7. The figures in column 5 are to be added, and the total must agree with the amount entered under the same head in the "General Statement of Receipts and Expenditure, Funds, and Effects."
