H.—1.

There will therefore be a deficiency for the year of £1,161 11s. 9d., in addition to which there was a debtor balance of £415 11s. 3d. at the end of 1879.

To meet the annual deficits which have arisen from the insufficiency of the income, grants have been made to the school from year to year ever since its foundation. During the time of the Provincial Government the amount of this grant was £1,500 annually, and it seems to have been intended to continue this Int. Rep., Evid., provision for the school until the reserves should become sufficiently valuable. 5440-1. Since the abolition of the provinces the finances of the school have been placed in a more precarious position, owing to the uncertainty of the contribution to be obtained from the General Government.

The number of pupils on the roll for 1879 was ninety-eight boys, besides eleven girls in the special classes. The number of masters on the regular staff is four, in addition to masters for modern languages and drawing.

Nelson College, founded in 1858, is in a flourishing condition, owing to the Nelson College. liberal foundation of £20,000, which originated in an agreement between the Int. Rep., Appx., New Zealand Company and the settlers. From this endowment a building was p. 40. erected at an original cost of £8,000, and it has since received considerable additions. The remainder of the money was placed on mortgage or invested in the purchase of land, and through careful management the capital has been greatly augmented, so that the present estimated value of the estate is £28,913 Ibid., p. 41. This sum includes the value of lands taken in exchange for original landed endowments, which did not form part of the foundation of £20,000. The Ibid., Evid., 3011, College buildings include accommodation not only for teaching, but also for 3086 The boarding establishment yields a profit, which is applied to the general purposes of the school.

The proper income and expenditure for 1879, excluding arrears and additions to buildings, is as follows:—

A grant of the acres of the Government Domain for a site and buildings was Int. Rep., Appx., p. 43. made by the Provincial Council on 24th February, 1857. The school buildings and boarding-houses have been erected on this site. (2.) It was endowed by the Church Property Trustees with one-fifth of the land which came to them from the Canterbury Association. (3.) Endowments and gifts were made from private sources, which were intended for scholarships and professorships in an upper department, in which the students are required to attend lectures in theology.

The greater part of the expense of the buildings has been met by private subscriptions, and by money taken from the general funds of the school, or borrowed
