

Date	Vessel Name	Type	Age	Tonnage	Passengers	Incident	Location	Weather	Severity	Remarks
1927, June 1	Maryland, s.s.	Schooner	2,962	40	..	Fouled a lighter	Auckland, N.Z.	Calm	..	Owing to hook on mooring-buoy straightening out, the vessel broke adrift, fouling a lighter astern. Slight damage to vessel
June 4	Sappho, o.e.v., 15 years	Cutter	3	1	35 milk-cans	} Collision	Auckland, N.Z.	Calm	..	The Court found that owing to a fog the vessels did not sight each other until within a distance of about 120 ft. on opposite courses. The Court was of opinion that when the master of the "Wynona" saw the "Sappho" going to starboard when about 50 ft. ahead of him he still could have avoided a collision by going to starboard. Instead of doing so he endeavoured to reverse his engines and stalled them. Had the master of the "Wynona" put the helm to port in addition to reversing the collision would have been avoided. The Court was also of opinion that whether or not the master of the "Wynona" was justified in considering he could pass the "Sappho" with safety on the course he was on, and therefore in not following the rule of the road to go to starboard, he erred in his judgment at a late time in not going to starboard when he saw the "Sappho" doing so, but the Court was of opinion that his not doing so was due to the effect upon his mind of the imminence of a collision and the responsibility of the large number of passengers in his care. The course he took was one which, whatever the effect upon the other vessel, safeguarded the lives of his passengers, and the Court therefore made no order of any kind
