

Photo: National Publicity Studios

Trees on a river flat killed by shingle, brought down as the result of erosion of the high country and smothering the low-lying land. In this valley, shingle to a depth of 48 feet has been deposited in 14 years. (Upper Waipaoa River, Poverty Bay.)