

Health in New Zealand

sets a standard for the world. Nowhere are there bonnier babies, finer children or happier homes. Nowhere is SCOTT'S Emulsion so widely known, or so frequently used.

In every home the great body-building, strength-making properties of SCOTT'S Emulsion meet some vital need. Taken regularly it wards off coughs, colds and infectious disease. But it must be genuine

Scott's Emulsion

OF SPECIALLY SELECTED
COD LIVER OIL

After all! You cannot beat the best.

Miss Ivy Cornish, trained at the Napier Hospital and later on the staff of the Palmerston North Hospital, who has been recently a Sister at the Otaki Sanatorium, has been appointed Matron of the Waiapu Hospital, Waipiro Bay.

Miss Pownall, Matron of Otaki Sanatorium, returned from her trip to England in September and has resumed her duties at Otaki. She visited many of the sanatoria for tuberculosis while away.

Miss Cabella Lord has resigned the position of Matron of Waihi Hospital.

Sister Nora Arnold, who trained at the Nelson Hospital, has been doing private nursing in London and on the Continent for the past five years, is at present doing theatre work at the Nelson Memorial Hospital, Wimbledon, London. She hopes to return to New Zealand next year.

Sister E. M. Arnold, who trained at the Wellington Hospital, was appointed in March Nursing Sister to the Nelson Boys' College. The position is a new one, and she finds her patients and duties varied and interesting.

Nurse E. J. Knight, who recently completed her three years' training at the Wellington Hospital, has resigned.

Nurse B. E. Stone-Wigg was promoted to the position of Sister.

Sister E. Berry, who left to take up midwifery training was re-appointed as Sister on the staff.

Sister Lea spent her annual leave after completing her course in the post-graduate course for the nursing diploma, at Hawera, with Sister Bessie Young.

Sister Doneghue has been spending her annual leave from Pukeora Sanatorium in Wellington.

Miss Bulkley, school nurse, Wellington, while on holiday at Honolulu, attended the Pan-Pacific Women's Conference as a delegate from New Zealand and went on for a trip to Japan.

Dr. Emily Siedeberg, of Dunedin, read a paper on Child Hygiene in New Zealand at Honolulu.