MISUNDERSTOOD.

Two rival physicians were recently exaggerating about the size of their respective practices.
'Do you know,' said Dr. Flipp, 'I was wakened up no less than five times last night.'
'Mercy, what a shame!' said Dr. Flapp. 'Why don't you get some insect powder?'

WHAT COULD HE DO?

MRS NUWED: 'Don't try to soothe me, sir! You have doubted my word.'
Nuwed: 'But, my darling, you must have spent the money or lost it. Only last Monday, I see by my cheque book, I gave you £10.'
Mrs Nuwed: 'There! There! You would sooner believe an old cheque book than me.'

AN EXPEDIENT.

'DAN and Kitty are so devoted to each other,' said the gushing seaside girl.
'I should think so,' said the cynic; 'the way they carry on.'
'Carry on?'
'Yes—wandering on the beach moonlight nights holding each other's hands, and skulking behind rocks with osculatory intent, and—'
'Why, of course. They are so fond of each other. And they don't like bathing the least bit because it's so public. So many bathers and people watching from the sand they can't do or say anything.'
'How ornul!'
'Yes. But they're going to get round it. They're practising it every day. Haven't you noticed them?'
'Practising what?'
'Why, diving from the float and staying under water long enough to kiss each other.'

ANOTHER MISUNDERSTANDING.

ALGY: 'Are you 37?'
Maudie: 'No, you horrid thing, I'm 17.'
