"You'd best have something, for you do look real bad," the woman persisted. "But there, if you won's, I s'pose you won's. Weil," she continued, estiling berreif once more in the chair and folding her ample arms, 'I've said this yer Mr Spencer was a skunk, and a skunk he was to her! And she was frit of him, downright frit—couldn's abear of him, far's I could see, and yet daren't speak to him hardly, she was that frit. Well, sir, I told you that they had a child "—she was getting loquacious now, in her placid, droning manner, and rocking hereoff with a atesdy swing that seemed to stimulate her conversation— anyway, there was a child with them, though I never could onderstand exactly whose 'twees, and he was more of a skunk to that child then it's in the natur of man to be to his cwn, and the child was took sick with the diphthery. That was when he bolted. Sick as sick the child was, poor little mortal! And then Mrs Spencer come out—come onts pretty strong, too. I hadn's had much of a notion to her while the man was with her—I don't mind confessin—with her dolly face and fool ways and no more spir't than a chipmunk; but when she come out as she did come out, I kinder changed my ideas of her. Yes, sir! The way she nursed that child, and sat up with her, day and night and Sundays and workdays, and never took no food, so she could buy medicines for the child, and get sick hereelf, and didn't care, but went on mursin' just the same—well, it was pretty strong! And — you'd just as well change your mind and have something,' the woman interposed earnestly, 'you're lookin' that skeered.'

'You're lookin' that skeered.'

'Go on.'

'Well, there sin't much more to tell. She took the ine man shook his head irritably.

'Go on.'

'Well, there sin't much more to tell. She took the diphthery then, as I said, and took it bad. And there was no one to nurse her—'cept what I did, and that wasn't much—and she'd sorter taken the grit out of herself with all the nursin' and watchin' and starving herself, and she couldn't seem ter stand out against it. And so—she didd. That's all.'

There was a pleam in her eyes, as she looked away across the sunny fields, as though tears were standing there. The man still leamed against the stem of the encalptus tree, twisting in his hands a fallen leaf that he had caught as it fluttered down.

'And the child?' he said at last 'This to the sa

And the child?' he said at last. . Did she die?'

*And the child The said at last. 'Did she die T' No, sit 't he woman answered, still very quietly. 'She didn't die. I guess the nursin's aved her. When she come round, 'she continued, presently, 'there was no one left to sake care of her, if you understand; so me and my husban' considerin' the lonesomeness of the poor little critter, kinder dopted her, not having any children of our own. And she's settled down with us just wonderful. It's real good to have her. Goldie, 'she cried, 'come here, dearie!'

The man turned quickly, shaking with a strange spasmodie tremor.

modic tremor.
'Goldie i' she called again, softly—'Goldie !'

The little girl who was playing in the bedge by the patch of sunflowers rose and turned toward them. For an instant she hesitated, shyly, wonderingly; then suddenly she stretched out her little arms and began to ran across the road.

' Daddy !' she cried.

Daddy I see cried.

The last tings of golden light was fading from the creats of the waves. The last faint flush of the susset was fading from the western sky. A tall, grizzled man and a golden-haired girl, ripening into womanhood, were standing on the hurricane-deck of the coesa steamer, watching the flush as it paied and died away.

He was a rich man from out West, everybody knew. Had been Mayor of Lumberville, some said, and had made a great fortune in livestock and grain. A solf-made man, who had risen from nothing, but deserved his success by straightforwardness and hard work. And the girl was his daughter.

straightforwardness and hard work. And the girl was nis daughter.
The finsh faded from the violes summer sky. The star came out, one by one, shining brightly in its clear depths. The man and girl turned from where they stood on the vessel's stern, and began to walk slowly back—in the direction where the sun, when it rose on the morrow morn, would rise on the rocky headlands and rugged oliffs that the man had last seen from the deck of the Ameterdam, as they taded into the blueness of the sky, close on fourteen years before. And as they turned, the clear voice rang out once more over the silent waters:

"All's well!"

THE DOINGS OF ABSENT-MINDED FOLK-

It is not pleasant to be absent-minded, but incidents in the lives of absent-minded people give rise to a great deal of laughter in this world. Of sourse no one believes that there is any truth in the story of the absent-minded man who put his cithes to bed, and hang himself carefully over the back of his chair; nor have we found anybody yet who had any confidence in the story of the absent-minded small boy who went fishing, and anchored the boat with his fish-hook, and abaudoned his sport because he could not find a worm large enough to bait the anchor with. These stories, however true they may be, seem slightly exaggerated, but there are others quite as interesting, and more faithful to facts. For instance, there is the story of a man who arranged to give an elaborate dinner to a numerous and distinguished company. The appointed evening arrived; the collation, an elegant one, was ready to be served, but the guests came not. Half an hour passed, and still they did not come, and the host became really uneasy. When the delay had grown to an hour, and not a man of them had shown up, his feelings were indescribable. And who can picture his agony of spirit when, on returning to his room, he chanced to pull open a drawer, and therein found the whole bundle of invitations which he had for-gotten to send out !

gotten to send out!

And what an absent minded young man that must have been who, while being married, replied to the minister's question if he was willing to take the young lady for his wedded wife, by seratohing his head, and asying, 'Yes, I'm willing; but I'd much rather have her sister.'

A WAYSIDE FLOWER.

It grew by the dreary roadside
In the sultry summer heat,
Where each passing breeze was laden
With the dust of herrying feet, a day hy day past it. The tide of travel beat.

It had for its sole companion
A rugged and gray old atone;
Whose heart to love ne'er softened
Though hot the ambeams shone, And for years it had been contented To rest by the wayside alone.

No stream sang in slumberous murmurs
The song of the far-off sea,
Perchance the dust-laden breeze told
Of its journeyings wild and free,
But to the wayside flower
Twas an echo of melody.

Still bravely the flower struggled And lifted its head to the sky. And of two as mile of welcome
As it caught the traveller's eye;
And many a thought it called forth
In the heart of a passer-by.

Though few of life's fair bleasings
Were granted it by fate,
Still, it fulfilled its mission,
Resigned to meekly wait,
Fall grateful for the gifts received
Though neither rich nor great.

There is many a wayside flower
Whose lot for life's brief day
Is the glare, and heat and turmoil
Along life's great highway,
Where only the passing breezes
From earth's aweet gardens play.

And as the flower at even
Relt cooling shadows fall,
When gentle star-eyes shone above
The blue, celestial wail,
So these are soothed and strengthened
By Him who watches all.

NELLIE C. DAVIS.

High Barnet.

SERVANTS' CHARACTERS.

A good housekeeper would never think of engaging a servant without a character, and she would want that reference from a and she would want that reference from a genuine source, now we (The Homocea Co.) do not ask the Colonial public to take us on our own statement, but we publish testimonials such as no proprietor of Patent Medicines has ever received; simply because no remedy has ever done the WORK of Homocea.

Whitehall, London. " Dear Sir,—Your oint-ment, called Homocea, was found to be the most was found to be the most soothing and efficacious unguent that I could possibly have for my fractured limb, as it seems to retain longer than any other, that oleaginousness so requisite for perfect and efficient massage. The fault of embrocations fault of embrocations generally, is that they harden and require warmth, whereas yours, besides being particularly aromatic, is as soft as oil, and almost instantly mollifying in the case of severe inflammation.—Yours faithfully, "HENRY M. STANLEY."

LORD COMBERMERE writes: — "Carlton Club, London.—I have tried your 'Homocea' upon myself for Rheuma'ism, and I found it do more good than any embrocation I have ever used, and several of my triends have benefited by its use. COMBERMERE." benefited by its use.

HOMOCEA . RHEUMATISM.
LADY KEANE has much pleasure in recommending Homocea as an invalable remedy for Rheumatism, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, &c.; she thinks so highly of it that she would not be without it in the house, as it has entirely cured h r of Rheumatism and other ailments. She can also testify to the healing properties of *Hippacea for stable use.

HILLSIDE, BRACKNELL, BERKS. January 5th, 1894.
*The Veterinary Preparation of Homocea.

LADY VINCENT, 8, Ebury Street, London, says it is such an incomparable application of Rheumatic Neuralgia, that she wishes to have two more tins sent.

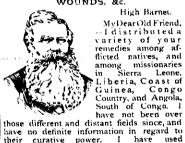

Afflicted with Neuralgia, Lumbago, Paralysis, Convulsions, Bruises, Strained Muscles, Pains in Joints, Aches and Sprains, Eczema, Burns, Tooth-Ache, Face-Ache, Chilblains, Boils, Ulcers, Stings, Chaps, and all kindred ills and complaints.

LORD CARRICK, of Mount Juliet, Thomastown, writes: --Homocea cured him of a very severe case of Hemorrhoids in a fortnight, when everything else had failed.

LORD CARRICK writes in another letter that Homocea is the most wonderful stuff he ever came across. That he had given it to people suffering from scurvy, a severe bruise, bad boil, and a stiff elbow, and in every case it had worked wonders.

Homocea" should be in every Cottage, Palace, Workshop, Barracks, Police-Station, Hospital, and Institution - and wherever a Pain-Relieving, Soothing, and Curative Lubricant is likely to be required. No discovery in the world of Healing remedies has had such high testimony.

MOSQUITO AND JIGGER WOUNDS, &c.

MvDearOld Friend. -- I distributed a variety of your remedies among afflicted natives, and among missionaries have no definite information in regard to their curative power. I have used "Homocea," and have proved its healing virtue both for severe bruises and flesh wounds, and also to kill the virus of mosquitoes and chigoes (jiggers). -Yours very truly, (Bishop) WM. TAVLOR, American Methodist Episcopal Mission.

HOMOCEA v. NEURALGIA.

THE HON, MRS. THOMPSON desires to testify to the great value of "Homocea" as a cure for Neuralgiz, having received great benefit from using it; Mrs. Thempson therefore has great pleasure in strongly recommending it, and in allowing her testimony to be publicly used.—Ackworth Moor Top, Pontefract, February 1st, 1894.

HOMOCEA v. RINGWORM.

Hoylake, August 10, 1893. Hoylake, August 10, 1893.

Dear Sirs,—I want to thank you for that wonderful preparation "Homocea," which we use for about everything; but lately my little girl had a bad ringworm on the head, and my doctor said her hair would have to be cut close. But I preferred using the "Homocea," and in four days it was quite "Homocea," and in four days it was quite well, and the doctor said I ought to give you a testimonial, and I think so too.— Yours truly,

M. ALDRED.

HIPPACEA. — The Veterinary Preparation of Homocen, for use in Stable, Kennel, and Farm. Recommended by Lord Combernere.

AND USED IN THE ROYAL KENNELS. Sold in Tins. Southing, Non-Irritant, Never Blisters, Checks Inflammation, Leaves no Scar. Endorsed by Many Leading English Trainers.

HOMOCEA IS SOLD IN TWO SIZES BY ALL STOREKEEPERS, GENERAL DEALERS, AND CHEMISTS. WHOLESALE AGENTS FOR NEW ZEALAND-

KEMPTHORNE, PROSSER & Co.; The New Zealand Drug Co., Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch, and Dunedin.