shout- bring ald-companies of the guard- the palace officers? But her throat was purched, and when she tried to utter a word only a husky sound come forth. And the debonair captain was longing at the outer entrance even t ben)

"Sire," she began, "I—I-" And then site stopped, paralysed with fear, for the hangings moved once more, and this time she could plainly see that some-one was looking at her from out of that hiding place, and she felt fascinated by

Then as she at length dragged her eyes away from that sight, it was for them to fall on the bell which was to be seen on the table near which the king stood. Dare she advance boldly and ring it, and thus give the abarm?

"I think, mademoiselle," began the king; but he could proceed no further, for there was a sharp rustling, and the girl darted forth her hand and pressed the bell the belt.

Then all was confusion, for the king gave vent to an exclamation, clapping his hand to the hilt of the light dress sword he were, for he divined the truth, and saw something which resembled the

"Treachery!" he cried, and he made a step forward; but at the same instant the girl had moved forward quickly to the table and swept the silver candle-sticks to the floor, plunging the apart-ment in darkness. Cimmerian in inment in darkness. Cinimerian in in-tensity, while there followed the rush of steps, a cry, a sound of steel meeting steel, to be succeeded immediately by lence—for her. When she opened her eyes it was to see that the apartment was in a blaze of light and filled by officers and men of the royal bodyguard, while the king was standing near, and Paul was looking down at her. She heard the king saying: "Well, Cup-tain Stalheim, you have captured these miscreants;" and then, turning to his son: "I owe my safety to her. You must persuade her to forget my words to-night."

The Black Family musicians have just completed a most successful South Island tour, and leave this week for Fiji, where they play a seven or eight weeks веснов.

In the Beginning . Things By Little Johnny

NULE NED, he sed, Uncle Ned did, di ever tel you about wot makes the owl look so wise?

I sed no, he dident, and he sed wen the owl was created he was the foolest lookin berd that you ever se, but he was smarter than a wip. It dident do him no good for to be so elever, cos none of the other berds an' annuals wold bleeve it, but only jest laughfed at him, and sed, Wot do you kno about it, iddict? So he went to Addam and sed, Sc here, mister, Ime mity tierd lookin like this.

Addam he sed, Same here, ole man, wot can we do for each uther?

The owl he thot a wife, and then he sed, You make me look real wize, and if you are ever overrun with yello leg put-lets He stand by you in yure trubble and help you for to thin them out, cos one good turn deserfs a uther.

Addam he sed, He do it, but you must remember this is a imperfeck world and no feller can have evry thing good wich is going.

So Addam lie flang him in to a deep sleep, and wen he woke up he went to a poul of cleor water for to drink. He seen his refleckhion in the water and jumpt back and sed, Hoo!

Addam he sed, Its you, you fool. I have made you the wisest lookin feller wich I knew how.

But at the same time he had made.

But at the same time he had made But at the same time he had made him sech a gum dasted iddiot that he cant say ony thing only but jest hoo, hoo, hoo. But he is believed to be so wize that evry thing which is in the werld hates him, and he is afrade for to go out in the day time, for they wild tare him to peeces. Johnny, that will teech you for to be content with yure looks, jest as you was made, and next time you se yure angel sister a primpin her self wen she is expecktin her yung man you may tel her expecktin her yang man you may tel her about the owl.

But the owl.

But my sister is the best lookin gerl in town, and Bildad, that's the new dog, is a other, and Mose, wich is the cat, can lick Bildad.

If I was cuts an dogs I wudent other, and Mass, wich is the cat, can lick Bildad. If I was eats an dogs I windom be so fitr, but wild obay my mother and go to Sundy skool, for the Bible it ses onesty is the lost politicks. Me and my father is Repubrans, but Mr Brily, the fat bucher, he is a Noble of the Mistick Srine and can-skin sheeps.— I ast Under Ned wot makes the ratle snake have ratles on his tail, and he sed, Johnny, he dont. That is a optickle alushion wich is du to the idleness of observers wich wont examin the ratler real close to. Wot they mistuke for ratles is the last joints of the spine of his back bone. It come about this way. The ratler he was created so ugly that it strangled him for to look at himself, and wen he dru near any thing for to be snake have ratles on his tail, and he sed. strangied him for to look at himself, alm wen he dru near any thing for to be sochiable it philed amain! Wel. I day he shedded his skin, like ol snakes do, and a other snake he shedded hisen sanie

So the rather he crold in to the other snakes skin for to hide his ugly, but it was a inch or 2 too short and the bones of the spine of his back thay stick out and rathe wen he shakes with frite, wich is frequent. Wot skares him the wurst is wen a buy is about to step on him with bis bare feets. Johnny, you shude be kind to the poor rather and not step on him if thare is plenty room.

And now, Johnny, He tel you a story bout a rather and a feller wich drinked wisky, wich is equal pizen. Me and the feller and Dockter Mutner was in the mountins a huntin. The dockter he had took along a jug of wisky, wich was for to cure snake bites. One day him and me we went out for to shoot bares, and wen we come home to camp the feller he was a hin in the tent with the jug in his arms, ded drunk, he dident kno a thing. Johnny, its offle for to se a drinkard wen he is himself, and I tore my hair and bewhailed both loud and sril. But the dockter he jest braced his back again a big tre for to think, and bime by he sed, I got it, I got it!

dockter he jest braced his back again a big tre for to think, and bime by he sed, I got it, I got it in the end of a long split stick, wich he poked at the drinkerd, and it bit him menny a time and oft. Johnny, it sounds like a misterry, and I wuldent ask you to bleeve it if I dident tel it my own self, but them snake bites restord the feller to helth and yousetleness, and he leept in to the primeryll forrest and run away, and he is now holdin a ofice of trust and proffit in Illinov.

I ast Uncle Ned wot become of the rathe snake, and he sed, Uncle Ned did. Thats a mity sad story, Johnny, and I dont like to speak about it. We took the snake out side the tent and let him go, and ferst thing he done was to ti hisself in to a double bo not. Then he stood on his hed and whaved his tail in the breeze and sed he was the Queen of Shehy!

But Billy, thats my brother, he ses

Sheby!

But Billy, that's my brother, he ses that if Uncle Ned didnt give us candy and tak us to the sho and make boes and arross for us he wild be a lier.

Injens eats sunkes, but giv me mints pi with plenty spice, and a aple dumplin and some squosh and a sping cake and a lot of sossidge and plenty pickles and some chickin gizzerds, wich is the stuf of life!

A Dealer in Animals.

Mr Hagenbeck, the famous dealer in wild unimals, whose head-quarters are at Berlin, has had remarkable experiences with his strange stock-in-trade.

STOOD ON HIS HEAD AM HIS TAIL IN THE BREEZE

He has had one or two most marvelleus escapes from violent death. At one time he had a female elephant who at the word of command used to swing him up on to her back with ker trunk. But one day when doing this "Betsy," as she was called, suddenly and without any warning or provocation dashed Mr Hagenbeck down on to the barrier in which she was inclosed. Just imagine it! The man held high in the air, and then hurled with all an elephant's tremendous power down on to a stout oak-en beam. But he was comparatively un-hurt, though the barrier was smashed. en beam. But he was comparatively unhurt, though the barrier was smashed. On another occasion he was in a van with six young elephants, when they took fright and broke loose. It was night-time. His light was overturned and went out, and, says Mr Hagenbeck simply: "I have no idea how I ever got out alive." Then another time he was in a van with an elephant, and was-examining a lock when the brute charged him from behind, its tusks-passing providentially one on cach side of his body, and doing no more serious slamage than breaking the skin. Once an alligator sent him with a flick of its tail into a tank in which were several alligators. He was out of that tank in remarkably short time. And the man who has had these hair raising experiences is a quiet, elderly gentleman, who, save for the compelling power of his grey eyes, does not in any way suggest that it is his business daily to hundle and turne wild animals. For the rest, Mr Hagenbeck is fairly tall, spare, and wirv, with a pleasant, mulable face, clean-shaven save for a fringe of greyich beard. He speaks English very well.

O C E A N

ACCIDENT AND GUARANTEE CORPORATION, Limited.

ALL CLASSES OF ACCIDENT INSURANCE. Write for Quetations

A. P. FRIEND, District Manager.

LOWEST CURRENT RATES

DISTRICT OFFICE, AUCKLAND-14 SHORTLAND STREET. Mead Office for New Zealand -

4 CUSTOM HOUSE QUAY, WELLINGTON

GRABLES M. MONTEFIORE, General Manager for New Zesiand.