Free Shooting Dangerous.

Some amazing statistics were given at the recent Sporta Congress at Paris by the Inspector of Forests in an argument against reducing the cost of shooting licenses. He said that in Bohemia licenagainst reducing the cost of shooting licenses. He said that in Bohemia licences had been abolished, and during the first fifty-two Sundays of free shooting fifty persons were killed, 3014 injured, and 24,469 domestic animals slain.

The Bashful Tsar.

When Peter the Great went to London to learn all about shipbuilding (at Dept-ford), William III. paid him much at-tention, though the former was som-what upset one day when the Tsar's monkey leaped on to his shoulders during a visit to the Russian monarch.

Peter was extremely bashful in society, and when William took him to the House and when William took him to the House of Lords he was too shy to go into the chamber, but, to their merriment, peeped at the peers through a window in the roof. Not to "snake fish of one and fish of the other," however, he treated the Commons in the same way. His shyness pursued him even at a hall which William gave at Kensington Palace in honour of the Princess Anne's birthday, for a little room was yot ready where he a little room was got ready where he could see the brilliant gathering without being seen himself. But in the dockyards among the working men his bash-fulness was gone, and whatever good points Peter had were displayed then.

♦ ♦ ● Here of Dargai Retires.

Colonel Mathias, the famous leader of the assault by the Gordon Highlanders on the heights of Dargai in the autumn of 1897, has just retired from the Army of 1891, has just restlement to the first, under the age regulation.

It was a critical enoment in a fight with the Afsidis when Colonel Mathias said to his men: "Highlanders, the General says the position must be taken at all costs. The Gordons will take it."

at all costs. The Gormons will take it.

And they did.

The regiment, to use the words of Sir William Lockhart's official despatch, dashed through a murderous fire, and in forty minutes had won the heights, leav-forty minutes had won the neights, reaving three officers and thirty men killed or wounded on the way.

Among the wounded was Piper Findlater, who, shot in both ankles, propped imself up against a boulder and piped
"The Cock o' the North" until the Gor-

The Cock of the North until the cor-dons had won the heights, and he had won the Victoria Cross. Sir William Lockhart recommended Colonel Mathias for the Victoria Cross, Colonel Matting but he never got it.

A good story is told of the steep climb A good story is tond of the steep climb which the charge entailed. "Stiff climb, ch, Mackie!" said Colonel Mathias, who was breathless, to the colour-sergeant by his side. "I'm not so young as I was, you know."

you know."
"Never mind, sir," the sergeant re-plied; "ye're gaun verra strong for an auld mon."

Redwers Buller's Tebezgan.

During the fighting with the Kaffira at the Cape, many years ago, Buller, not then Sir Redvers, found a body of not then Sir Redvers, found a body of the enemy strongly posted at the foot of the table-land on which he and his men were standing. Before the natives could be beaten and driven away, the British force had to get down the steep sides of the plateau under fice. Buller has always been the soldier's friend. What he wants his men to do he must What he wants his men to do he must do with them and, if need be, show the way. So when they reached the edge of the precipice he jumped up, and, pointing to another regiment, called to his troops, "You won't let these other red-coats beat you." Then sitting down at the head of the slope he just made hismself into a tologgan and slid down the hillside in spite of the Kaffir wre, which luckily missed him, and by the time he had formed his men at the foot total angle darkey could be seen. They not a single darkey could be seen. They had all vanished at the night of the bold man sliding down a precipios in order to gunish them.

Thoughts of Master Minds.

Avoid shame, but do not seek glory; nothing so expensive as glory .- Sydney Smith.

Between us and hell or heaven there is nothing but life, which of all things is the frailest.—Pascal.

Literature is the daughter of heaven, who has descended upon earth to soften and charm all human ills.—Bernardin St. Pierre.

Though men be much governed by in-terest, yet even interest itself, and all human affairs, are entirely governed by opinion.—Hume.

Were we as eloquent as angels we should please some men, some women and some children much more by listen ing than by talking.-Colton.

Women carry a beautiful hand with them to the grave, when a beautiful face has long ago vanished, and ceased to enchant.—Lord Beaconsfield.

The power to feel love is the measure of man's divinity, and any man may have as much of this power as he will exercise. It is the one realm in which whoever will may be a king.—Clara E. Lauchlin.

Civil liberty requires for its support religious liberty, and cannot prosper without it. Religious liberty is not an empty sound, but an orderly exercise of religious duties and enjoyment of all its privileges.—Philip Schaff.

Bedygnards of the Rich.

It is no exaggeration to say that scores of millionaires in New York, in scores of millionaires in New York, in order to gain privacy in their homes, are guarded quite as closely as any king. It is literally true that the President of the United States is much more easy to approach by any ordinary citizen than many owners of great fortunes. It is not generally known, for instance, that whereas anyone might call up the President by telephone, or at least the White House, it is impossible to do the same with many New York millionaires. The names of the possessors of great The names of the possessors of great fortunes do not appear in the telephone directors. These men are not without telephone communication with the outtelephone communication with the out-side world, but they choose to have private wires laid to their houses, in order to avoid the annoyance of being continually rung up. In other words, these houses are far more isolated than these houses are far more isolated than the average private residence, and the inconvenience they must endure is of course obvious. While they can ring up sayone, they themselves cannot be called on the telephone except by the chosen few who have their private num-bers, so that the seclusion works both

Mr. Andrew the most part unsolidied. Mr. Andrew Carnegie, for instance, receives an average from four to eight hundred letters a day making direct appeals for charity. His own personal mail, which is naturally large, is not included in this number.

Device to Save Millions.

The American Steel Trust has adopted The American Steel Trust has adopted a fuel-saving device which, it is believed will reduce the organisation's total cost of production he same millions a year. A method has been discovered by which the exormous quantity of gas given off in the amelting of the iron ores can be profitably utilised. Hundreds of gas engines have been ordered to furnish the melive power for the trust's enormous plant. Four engines of this type have been in use at the Edgar Thompson were in use at the regar litemson. Works, which form part of the steel combine, for some time. Forry Boat Typists.

The New York municipal government as officially recognised the American has officially recognised the American craze for speed by installing typists and machines on its nanicipal ferry-boats running between Staten Island, one of the most popular of the residential sub-urbs, and the business district of the city.

The trip takes twenty minutes, but the business men who live in Staten Is-land and make money in Wall-street have been complaining loudly that this have been complaining loudly that was a criminal waste of time. The manded an accelerated service, but the city's engineers pointed out that a quicker service was impossible they de-clared that something would have to be done to save the time wasted on the Selected for Beauty.

The Russian newsweet, "Slove" draws attention to the remarkable array of heauty among lady employees of the Post and Telegraph Offices in St. Petersburgh.

The public have hitherto been incline ! to regard the fact as due to chance, but the "Slovo" now states that it is th esult of careful selection on the part of

It has been discovered that the written applications of several lady aspirants which were refused on the grounds of "no vacancies" had been markel with lead pencil notes in the margin and crased so badly that they could and reased so badly that they could sasily be read.

One of these remarks ran: "Thirty years old, unsightly, small, bad figure."
Amother corner note in microscopic betters denounced the applicant as "o'd, ugly, thin, and too ligh," while others are even less complimentary.

The "Slovo" suggests that in future the national ballet should be recruited exclusively from the female staff of the post offices.
