Sultan in a Bort of gilded captivity until Sulfan in a worf of glided captivity unti-his death, in 1895. Nicholas, ruter of the Black Mountains, Anther-in-law of the present King of Italy, of King Peter of Servia, and of a comple of Bussian grand dukes, has never been out of debt for the last thirty years or more, his liabilities art-sing partly from or mode, its fatolities arising party from his anxiety to maintain a royal court on a scale similar to that of other European sovereigns without having the means to do so, and partly from his mania for gambling. King Victor Emmanuel, the funds from the Montenegrin postal de-partment. It was not until the prince had obtained a very large sum of money in this fashion that the Austrian postal authorities discovered the trick, which in this fashion that the Austrian postal authorities discovered the trick, which his absolute control of every branch of the government at Cettinje had enabled him to play at their expense, and thereupon a suspension of all intercourse by nail with Montenegro was decreed from Vienna, which lasted until the prince made a personal appeal to the emperor, who paid the amount due to the Austrian late Czar, Nicholls II., and Francis Joseph of Austria, have all enjoyed in turn the privilege of paying his most pressing inhilities, not once but several times, mith he has exhausted their patience and their generosity, and among the many extraordinary devices to which he has had recourse in order to raise the financial wind, has been that of sending large money-orders to various points in Austria and Hangary, where they were castled through his agents by the Austrian and Magyar post offices, which were subsequently unable to recover the

PRINCE NICHOLAS I, OF MONTE-NEGRO.

KING PETER I. OF SERVIA.

and Hungarian post offices out of his own

KING ALFONSO XII.

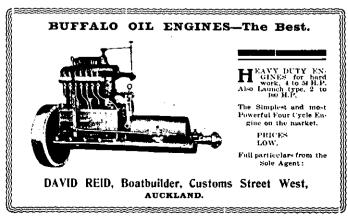

at the time of his restoration to the throne of Spain, was deeply in the debt of the late Duke of Santona, who had started life as a hatter in Madrid, and subsequently made an immense fortune in Cuba. Indeed, his financial assistance contributed in no small measure to King Alphonso's recovery of the throne of his

Many of the titles of nobility granted

KING LOUIS' CASTLE, NEUSCHWANSTEIN, BAVARIA.

This is one of several castles erected at enormous expense by the "Mad King." His extravagance was so great that only recently, 20 years after his death, have his debts been finally paid.

within the last hundred years have been bestowed in recognition and perhaps as part repayment of personal loans to the anointed of the Lord. There are few of them who have not at one time or another been in debt, or who are in a position to show the same spirit of independence that was manifested by the late Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe at the Congress of German sovereigns at Frankfort, in 1863. At one of the great entertainments given by the Senate of the then Free City of Frankfort, all the rulers present were assembled in a reserved saloon, engaged in autmated conversation. Suddenly they all, with one exception, rose to their feet, and advanced to meet a small and insignificant-looking man who had just entered the room. within the last hundred years have been bestowed in recognition and perhaps as to meet a small and insignificant-looking man who had just entered the room. The prince who had remained seated was Adolph of Schaumburg Lippe.

"Who is the fellow about whom you are making all this fuss?" he growled to the sovereign Elector of Hesse.

"Why, don't you know him?" replied the latter, "It is Baron Rothschild. Let me make you acquainted with him. Surely you do not want to be the only one here who does not extend a gracious welcome to him?" retorted Prince Adolph. "What do I care about the fellow? I do not owe him anything."

THE LATE KING CARLOS I. OF PORTUGAL.

low! I do not owe him anything."
Prince Adolph was the only one of all the kings, grand dukes, and sovereign electors and princes present, who could afford thus to show his independence, every one of the others having been at the house of Rothschild.

A Bald-headed Man.

'The man who has a bald head is to be

The man who has a bald head is to be commiserated.

Every change of seasons brings him to grief, n cold weather he has to seek refuge by night in a nighteap; in warm weather his bald spot is the chosen playground and gymnasium for flies.

They hold high carnivals on its polished convexity, and turn somersaults, and execute trapeze movements, and stand on their heads, and buzz in a self-satisfied, secure sort of tone as if they were saying to their victim, "Slap away old fellow! you can't hit as! you haven't got eyes in the top of your head like us."

us."

The bald-headed man is a prominent object in church, or in a crowd of any kind, where custom decrees the removal of the hat. One can no more avoid seeing his shining cranium than he can avoid seeing a bright light on a dark night, even when he is not looking at it.

avoid seeing a bright light on a dark night, even when he is not looking at it. It He is always described as bald-headed. Inquire about him of a stranger, and he will tell you that you cannot miss finding Jones—he is very bald!

A young man with a bald head, if he sensitive, is continually in hot water. When he meets a young lady who takes his fancy captive, how careful he is always to keep his face towards her, and liow the cold sweat of apprehension starts out on his forehead when she gets behind him, and he knows her "dovelike eyes of heaven" own azure" are engaged in studying his bald spot!

At lectures and concerts—particularly at theatres, where the elevation of dresscircle, family-circle and gallery afford such excellent opportunity for observation, the bald-headed man is always nervous and uncomfortable. He knows that if the impudent little urchins in the gallery do not throw peanut-shells at his gallery do not throw peanut-shells at his bald crown, it is not because they do not want to, or because they do not fully understand what a capital target it would make; and when the giggling young lady in the first circle drops her programme on his head, it is hard for him to believe it was purely acidental him to believe it was purely acidental on her part.

And as he sits and revolves the mat-ter over, how indignant he feels against the fashion which compels a man to sit bareheaded in a crowd, while it allows a woman to invest her money in two pounds of false-hair and an ounce of lace feathers, by which all defects in her upper story are concealed.

For if a woman he bald-headed nobody is the wiser for it, and so long as the

For if a woman be bald-headed nobody is the wiser for it, and so long as the present style of female hair-dressing continues, it is just as unlikely to be discovered as the source of the Nile, or the precise location of the poles.

Your bald-headed man especially dreads

Your bald-headed man especially dreads to make calls where there are children. He does not like to be asked "if he varnishes his head like ma does her boots," and "if he is not afraid his brains will freeze," and "if he won't please let me and Tonnny draw the map of Europe on it? 'cause he's just beginning to draw maps, and this will be so jolly."

The hald-headed ways of

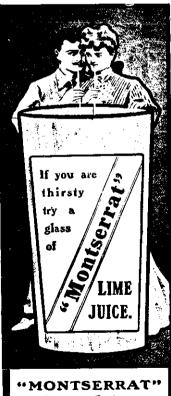

The bald-headed man of old had trouble with the boys, you will remember, but the young rascals met with summary punishment, and we have no summary punishment, and we have no doubt but that the bald-headed man of the twentieth century would rejoice if there were bears provided to eat up all the boys who jeer at their affliction! We are sure we should, if we were a bald-headed man!—By KATE THORN.

TEXAS NEWS.

Texas man (on a visit East); "Hello, Jake! Glad t' see ye. When d'ye leava Texas?"

Texas?"
Jake: "Las' week."
Texas Man: "When I left there was two claimants for the office of mayor in our town. Is the question settled yit?"
"Yep."
Texas Man: "Texas Man and the office of mayor in our town. Is the question settled yit?"

Texas Man: "Wich one is dead?"

Lime Juice

is made from cultivated limes, and is always fresh and pleasant to the taste. Mixed with plain or aerated water, it makes a cooling, refreshing healthful drink.

MADE IN TWO KINDS -Unsweetened, i.e., Plain Lime Juice. Sweetened-i.e., Lime Juice Cordial.