Inter-department Match

HE-annual outing of two most important State Departments was held this year at Lower Hutt, instead of Day's Bay, the ericket match and sports coming off on the Recreation Ground, while the Hutt Bowling and Tennis Club kindly made arrangements for the bowling and tennis fixtures. Treasury had a day out, and won all along the line, the only surprise being the defeat of the Audit's tennis representatives, who certainly appeared the stronger four on paper, the first single and, perhaps, Vivians, being the only rulbers Treasury felt confident about. However the latter Department about. However the latter Department won the match by 4 rubbers to 2, 8 sets to 6, and 58 games to 59:—

Singles.—T. H. Jones v. G. H. Richardson, 0: 1, 8—6; E. Toms v. G. G. Smith, 0—6, 3—6; H. Vivian v. T. H. Hamer, 6—3, 7—5; G. King v. C. V. Chamberlain, 1—6, 0: 6 (King retired after first set).

Doubles.—Jones and Toms. v. Richardson and Smith, 6—1, 2—6, 4—6 ("Minga" was tired in this rally!); Vivian and King v. Hamer and Chamberlain, 2-6, 6-2, 6-0 (a good recovery, but Audit must have won had "Joe" Chamberlain done anything right in the last two sets).

A Friendly Encounter-Kelburne v. Bons Bay.

Rona Bay entertained the members of the recently formed Kelburne Club on January 12, when the visitors won a closely contested and interesting match by the narrow margin of nine games (88-79), each side securing six rubbers. The Final Test-Great Britain v. Australia.

SYDNEY, January 17.

SYDNEY, January 17.

The tenuis test match. British lates v. Australia, opened in dull, muggy weather. The course were fast. There was an attendance of 3,000.

The feature of the contest was the brilliant display of Brookes, who defeated Dixon in two love sets, the first lasting eleven minutes and the second nine minutes. Dixon played a pilucky uphili game, getting in a number of smart serves, and scring shots, but Brookes was unplayable, and Dixon had not a look in at any stage of the same. The champhon sent down many same of the control of the same of the sent shot, and of conceasing his own intentions.

The opinion of observers who have seen Brookes play offens is that he never played better. Again and again he sent back the winning shot when it seemed shopossible to reach the bell.

Hrookes himself declares that he played the best game of his life. He took 27 sees to 12, and 28 to showed to Beamish in the slugles, Beamish showing beautiful back-hand work and cross-curif diyes.

Lowe played Jones on an open court, while simultaneously another match was proceeding on the main court. Lawe's resembnent at the uncreased court, and at the spectators sires ming past, badly affected his game.

Heath made a good stand against Parke, but his weak backhand work was costly. In the doubles, Brookes and Dunlop playing in the singles. Brookes again sent down many unplayable serves, and his network was perfect. The Australian pair took the first set to love, a most unusual feat in modern first-class doubles.

Farke and Lowe fought a close contest with Heath and Jones. Heath proved an

SYDNEY, January 18.

The weather was bright and extremely hot when the tennis match between Australia and Great Britain was resumed. The attendance was about $5,000. Most interest centred in the meeting of Brookes and Brookes, the score at one stage reading $5-2 in his favour. Then efter a great deal of amentagily clever voileying Brookes covered birdy, and took four games in succession, making the score $6-5 in his favour. Parke won the best two games, but Brookes secured the last three, and took the get after 31 minutes play.

Tarke won the first game in the second set, mainly through two great recoveries, but subsequently Brookes mixed big game and rattled Farke, who made home weak strokes. Brookes was right at the top of his game. The set lasted 18 minutes Brookes securing 43 sees to 43 and 51 to 20. This match was noteworthy, as 1t was Parke's first defeat in Australiasia.

Dunlop made a better showing in the Brookes securing 45 acces to 43 and 31 to 20. This match was noteworthy, as it was Parke's first defeat in Australiada.

Dunlop made a better showing is the singles against Lowe than he did on Friday, but he found Lowe's superior placing too much for him.

Jones won the first set against Beamish, but went to pieces afterwards, the heat affecting his energy.

Heath opened sensationally against Dixon, taking the set to love. Dixon thereafter played landitely better, and the score in the second set reached three all. Ten duces were called in the fourth and Jones, mululy through Jones' fine network over the second set reached three all. Ten duces were called in the fourth and Jones, mululy through Jones' fine network over the second set were to bis alde, but Beamish tired towards the nish, finding the net too often.

Brookes and Dunlon, as anticipated, defeated Farke and Lowe, Farke nisyed many pretty passing shots, and Lowe's serving occasionally best even Brookes.

The following are the results:—
Lowe beat Dunlon, 6—2, 6—4.

Beamish beat Jones, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4.

Dixon beat Heath, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Brookes beat Parke, 9—7, 6—2.

Heath and Jones beat Beamish and Dixon, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1.

Brookes and Dunlop beat Farke and Lowe, 6—2, 8—3.

Australia won seven matches, 17 sets, and 6-2,6-3.

140 games, Great Britain Winning five matches, 12 sets, and 121 games.

Dixon declares that in his long career he has never seen anything to equal the display that Brookes gave on Friday.

Gruesome Discovery.

"Collier's Weekly" recently published particulars of a gruesome discovery which throws an entirely new light upon the habits and customs of the prehistoric people of Peru, and suggests that there existed in South America a civilisation many centuries older than that which was brought to an end by the Spanish conquest. Miss Grace Wentworth, who tells the story of the discovery, states that she received it first hand from a steamboat engineer, and in proof of the facts "Collier's" publishes a very convincing photograph. It appears that the engineer and a companion n a journey inland while their ship was voyaging up the Uayali River in Peru. The ship had run out of fresh meat, and it was necessary to try some game. Quite near the bank of the river a clearing was noticed amongst the dense growth which fringed the stream, and the engineer caught eight of something resembling a stone wall. Such an object was extremely strange in the middle of a dense jungle, atrange in the middle of a dense jungle, hundreds of miles from the nearest village, and it was decided to investigate. At the bottom of a small footbill the engineer and his friend found a wall about twenty-five feet high and two hundred feet long. It had apparently been made of red clay, but ages of tropical heat and rains had turned it to a greenish hue. Along the top of the wall at regular intervals were large ornamental vases of the same material as the wall. A ladder was improvised, and the exvases of the same material as the wait.

A ladder was improvised, and the explorers reached the top of the wall. They found it was part of a vast enclosure, filled to within a few feet of the top with human skeletons, millions in numwith human skeletons, millions in number. A photograph was taken of the weird scene, and archaeologists who have inspected it assert that the vases which decorate the wall are not of Astee design at all, but characteristically Persian. The annals of South American archaeology throw no light on the mystery of how this huge pit of hones came to be constructed or of the nation that constructed it.

What Dislodges Sea Walls.

The dislodging by wave action of large stones or masonry blocks from the face of break-waters or sea walls has been investigated by the engineering department of University College, Dundee. Such blocks weighing several tons have been forced out, even under heavy overlying courses, and it has been explained that the effect might be due to hydrostatic pressure, exerted upward and outward above the line of wave impact, or to a compression of air entrapped in openings struck by the water. In the experiment made, it was assumed that the striking wave has a maximum velocity of 80 feet per second. It was found that this would give a maximum internal hydrostatic pressure—like that of a pressure from the enclosed air of about 6 tons per square foot. The experiments proved, however, that a vastly greater force might be present—that of water-hammer action, such as is sometimes noticed when the flow of water through a long pipe is suddenly stopped at the Dundec. ment of University College, noticed when the flow of water through a long pipe is suddenly stopped at the open end. This would occur under special conditions only, but it was shown that the impact upon an open joint of a wave of the stated velocity might set up a water-hammer action of 40 tons per square foot, or even more. It was suggested that walls exposed to waves should have drains or openings on the inner side to prevent excessive water, air, or water-hammer compression.
