

IRISH COLLEENS IN LONDON SHOW THEIR ADMIRATION FOR THE BRAVE COLONIAL SOLDIERS WHOSE DEEDS AT GALLI-POLI STIRRED THE NATION—A pretty incident in Trafalgar Square, showing Irish colleens pinning sprigs of shamrock on sturdy colonials.

PRETTY POLLY'S LONG VOYAGE.—This cockatoo is a great favourite of the wounded soldiers at Harefield Park, England, and the colonial men seen in the illustration are taking the bird back to Australia with them, whence they are returning shortly.

WELSH FLAG DAY IN LONDON.—St. David's Day was recently celebrated in a practical manner when it was made the occasion of a Welsh Flag and Postcard Day, while a plentiful show of daffodils were also on sale. MISS OLWEN LLOYD GEORGE (on left) and MISS OWEN JONES are shown starting out from No. 11 Downing Street early in the morning.

BRITISH NURSES RETURN HOME.—A party of British Red Cross nurses belonging to the Anglo-Serbian Hospital, in charge of Dr. Berry, recently arrived in London after a very adventurous and exciting journey across enemy countries. Our illustration shows DR. MAY DICKINSON BERRY (sitting), who was in charge of the party, SISTER J. AMOT (on left) and SISTER A. BROCK. They are all wearing the Serbian Military Cross, which was presented to them before leaving Serbia in recognition of their splendid work on the Serbian battlefield.
