

A presentation of travelling rugs was made to Mr. J. A. Manson by the directors of Manson and Barr, Ltd., Palmerston North, prior to his departure on an extended business trip to United States, Canada and Britain.

Captain Watson, D.S.O., of the Australian cruiser Melbourne, at a smoke social given to the fleet upon its arrival at Darwin last month, referred briefly to the part which the Australian fleet had played in the war. On August 3, 1914, he said the Australian Fleet was at Harvey Bay, and immediately set out to look for the German China Fleet. With the fleet were the two submarines, A.E.1 and A.E.2. The former was lost off New Guinea, and the latter in the Sea of Marmora, but before going to their doom they played a conspicuous part in conjunction with the destroyers. Otherwise it was quite possible for the German China Fleet to avoid the Australia, and it might have bombarded some of the Australian seaports. The story of the Emden is now well known. The cruisers Melbourne and Sydney were conveying fifty troop ships to England, and the Sydney was detached from the convoy to sink the Emden, which she did in a very gallant manner.
