

The Prince of Wales has been appointed Colonel-in-Chief of the 12th (Prince of Wales' Royal) Lancers and the Royal Scots Fusiliers, and Honorary Colonel of the 5th (Prince of Wales') Battalion (Territorial) Devon Regiment, and 15th (County of London) Battalion the London Regiment.

When in Wellington, Mr. Albert Goldie, after discarding on the beauties and up-to-dateness of Los Angeles, was asked how the cost of living there compared with what it is in New Zealand. Mr. Goldie said as a family man he was interested in the question, and as far as he could judge home living in Los Angeles was about a third cheaper than in New Zealand. The hotel life in America was expensive, but the home life not at all so. The only thing that was dearer in Los Angeles was meat.

The Wellington citizens' memorial to the late Lieutenant F. B. Crouch, formerly of Kilbirnie, who was killed in action on the western front in March, 1918, is, on the suggestion of the Mayor, to take the form of "a scholarship for the education of some young men, who, like Lieutenant Crouch, did not begin life in favourable circumstances." On the outbreak of war the late Lieutenant Crouch was employed in the Railway Department, and early in 1915 he went Home to settle certain private business affairs. He afterwards enlisted in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, and soon proceeded to France. He was killed in action on March 23, 1918, during the opening days of the German offensive. He bequeathed the whole of his estate, valued at about £1000, to the Wellington War Relief Association, for the benefit of soldiers and their dependents.

The returned soldier, Mr. Reginald William Dancy, who was found dead in his house, St. Clair, Dunedin, came to the Dominion some seven years ago from London, where his father, a doctor of music, is the organist in one of the leading churches. At the outbreak of war deceased was employed by Messrs. Sargood, Son, and Ewen, and left New Zealand with the Main Body as a gunner. He was gassed in France, where he gained his lieutenantancy. He returned to New Zealand about seven months ago, and joined the staff of Messrs. Butterworth Bros. From the time of his arrival in New Zealand he was a member of St. Matthew's choir, Dunedin, and he was also secretary of the Choral Society.
