London's Great Victory Pageant --- Mighty Tribute to Allied Troops.

AN IMPRESSIVE SPECTACLE DURING THE BRILLIANT MARCH THROUGH LONDON OF THE ALLIED TROOPS ON JULY 19, THE DAY APPOINTED FOR THE EMPIRE PEACE CELEBRATIONS. INFANTRY WITH THEIR COLOURS PASSING THE MEMORIAL TO THE DEAD IN WHITEHALL. The most appealing incidents of the day were at the Cenotaph in Whitehall. This monument, a pillar of massive simplicity, crowned with a great laurel wreath, was inscribed to "The Glorious Dead." Four Guardsmen stood at the corners of the memorial with arms reversed and heads bowed. Emotion was almost unbearable when such victors as Sir Douglas Haig, Marshal Foch, General Pershing, and Admiral Beatty saluted the dead.

A DAY OF OVERWHELMING TRIUMPH FOR THE ALLIED TROOPS. AMERICAN TROOPS PASSING THROUGH THE ALBERT GATE DURING THE GREAT VICTORY PAGEANT, WHICH WAS HEADED BY SIR DOUGLAS HAIG. The huge procession, in which all the Allied nations were represented, occupied 2½ hours in passing, and was hailed with delight by millions of people. Features of the march were the heart-stirring cheers for Marshal Foch, Sir Douglas Haig, Admiral Beatty (who was deeply moved), General Pershing, and the gallant women, though, indeed, everyone in the march was thunderously acclaimed. London was brilliantly beflagged for the occasion, while the tornado of cheers which resounded all along the route has never been equalled in intensity in the world's history.
