Pukatea Timber.—Mr. E. Phillips Turner, of the Lands Department, supplies the following reply to a correspondent who inquired as to the value of this tree: Pukatea, though in the past almost entirely neglected, is a timber of very high quality. It is tough, light, and soft, and when sawn "on the back" has a very beautiful figure. The colour of the heart-wood is a light brown with darker waves. It has been used to a small extent for boat-building, but its proper use is for furniture and cabinet-work. It should be suitable for three-ply and veneer work, and any one possessing a considerable quantity of the timber, and wishing to dispose of it, should communicate with Messrs. Ellis and Burnand, of Hamilton, who have a three-ply and veneer plant at their mill at Manunui. Large furniture-makers would probably also purchase the timber. Pukatea is a close relation to the "stink-wood" of South Africa, which is so highly valued for furniture that it sells for 2s. per cubic foot on the stump.
