HIGHWAYS OF STEEL

The Strength of our Nation

The very life of a progressive community depends upon efficient, economical transport . . . and no progressive community can possibly prosper without railways to carry the concentrated flows of heavy traffic into and out of the big towns and cities.

Here in New Zealand, 3,480 miles of railways—heavy-duty steel roads—provide the main arteries for our commerce . . . the basis for more productive use of power and human skill than is possible with any other means of transport.
