Offences Not Otherwise Described.

YOKOHAMA (JAPAN).—£50 REWARD.—Charles Adams, alias Charles Edward Adams, alias E. C. Passey Adams, English or Welsh, son of a butcher, formerly of Wales, also of Leicester, and of 7, Vigo Street, London, W.C. Claims to be a chartered accountant. Age (1893) about thirty, height about 5ft. 7in., clear complexion, dark smooth hair and small black moustache, generally clean shaven except upper lip; quick restless eyes, which are bluish or blue-grey, and rather large hands, with broad flat nails and large bony knuckles. Features sharp, especially the nose. One arm (if not both) tattooed by Japanese, the design supposed to be a fan with Japanese girl on upper arm and an eagle on forearm. The tattooing remained in an unfinished state for some time, but may have been completed. Has marks of small-shot wounds on various parts of body and limbs, but they may now be very indistinct. Very fond of horse-racing, and prides himself on being a good jockey; given to billiards, and plays a fair but uncertain game; fond of loose company. Very nervous temperament, and drinks a good deal by himself; professes to be a good boxer, although this is questionable; is a clever book-keeper, and exceptionally quick at figures. Resided several years in Japan (1886 to 1891) but understands little Japanese. Was for some years in the employ of Messrs. M. Levy and Co., of Japan, who thought so much of him that, from the 7th of August, 1890, during a visit to Europe of the resident partner, he (Adams) was left in charge in Japan, and was intrusted with the firm's power of attorney. In August, 1891, offender absconded in the sailing-vessel "Benjamin Sewell," bound for America. It was then found that during the time he was in charge of the firm's interest he robbed them to the extent of several thousands of dollars. He also stole and shipped goods belonging to the firm, part of which was seized on arrival of the steamer in London, November, 1891. He also robbed the private effects of his dead friend and chum in Kobe. There is another matter of much more serious nature that he will no doubt be charged with if arrested, and a reward of £50 is offered by Messrs. M. Levy and Co., 76 Yokohama, Japan, for information leading thereto. There is every reason to believe this offender is now in the colonies, and, if found, he should be kept under surveillance, and information sent to the Commissioner of Police. Photograph and fac-simile of signature at Inspectors' offices. (93/1332.)
