by many. The tower room can be used as an open-air sleeping room, or it may be fitted with windows and used as a sleeping room or den. And here is another pleasing innovation. The rear part of the roof can easily be made into an attractive roof garden. The dimensions of this house are $43\frac{1}{2}$ feet front and $44\frac{1}{2}$ feet deep, exclusive of porch, nook, etc. As indicated by the illustration, this house should have a site that will set it off to advantage and lend itself to scenic effect.

No. 2—This house is two full stories high, with all the charm and grace of a beautiful bungalow. It has been placed in among the one-storey houses because of its appearance, and with the thought that it might fit someone's needs better than a one-storey. The upper floor has a large family and
