

10 YEARS ON BEHIND THE SCENES

Dave & Graham from Hello Sailor wait for the Issue 3 interview to end so they can watch Telethon.

Former Split Enz bassist Mike Chunn backstage after Citizen Band opened for Graham Parker in Wellington. Mike wrote early RIU Rumours under pseudonym L.B. Sands and did local "punk" reviews.

In late 70s free outdoor concerts were held in Albert Park most Sundays and organised by radio stations. The audience sat down for most shows but stood for the Suburban Reps (pictured).

Writer Louise Chunn hams it up with fellow party goer. Punk parties had paper plates. Top right Andy Anderson as rock star at Hinera festival prior to acting career in Oz soaps. Writer Frank Stark as punk muso at State Theatre dance.

Peculiar to Rip It Up's early years were car interviews conducted en route to or from the airport. By that means exclusive interviews were gained from Graham Parker, George Benson (in a nice limo), Dr Feelgood and Roger McGuinn (pictured) in a Honda Civic.

A Ramone reads Rip It Up and Knox struts his platforms at Sweetwaters.
