

spiritual being or self that I apprehend myself to be. To many, such philosophies provide satisfactory explanations of man as viewed from the outside, but they fail abysmally when applied to man as seen from the inside, which is the privileged position each of us has in respect of his own self.

SIR JOHN ECCLES,
Department of Physiology,
Australian National University,
Canberra, A.C.T.