What a picture of the world is preted in this verse. The sun of ce and prosperity is hidden behind black clouds of war and confusion, iging darkness over the face of earth. For many peoples the day freedom is approaching its evenand the night of bondage to ruthless tyrant is beginning to pen. Ahead lies the gloom with one star of hope to be seen. Helphe relied upon have failed-every-Com ig seems to be lost. Our own nawhich for long has stood as the mpion of the oppressed and the er of the helpless, has had to fall and for the time being, abandon somell nations to a common enemy,noran, more, she is even now steeling Batterelf for an onslaught of fury, from wing e that knows no honour or reason, d the cold blooded cruelty and force, e the birds of prey are preparing arly ounce upon the possessions which be snatched away with safety ng the conflict. Where then are to look for help, for surely the its of the past nine months should rince anyone that "vain is the help th man!" It is easy to say "Look he Lord, the helper of the helplent? but the sober truth is that since __war of 1914-1918, the world in 'al, including our own nation, has command glected and turned from and des-N.Z.A. "Poor old Fred seems to have got it badly," said Maud.

"What's he been doing now?" ask-

"Well, ever since he got engaged to the vicar's daughter, he's been wearing his collars wrong way round, and now he's having stained-glass windows put in his new car."

Sergeant-Major: "You've only one spur."

Recruit: "Yes, sir. The other's broken."

"How the dickens do you expect to ride a horse with only one spur?"

"Well, sir, if I can get this side of the horse to go I think the other side will follow."

A sailor was spinning his yarns to a youngster-and was making a hairraising job of it, too.

"Once, when I was shipwrecked, sonny," he said, "I was all by myself and lived for three days on a tin of sardines."

"Gor blimey, sailor," said the boy, "you didn't have much room to move about, did you?"

Here's the second of 'em:-

Out for her daily walk, the ancient lady met a sailor and stopped him. "I've always wondered," she said, "why sailors wear such loose-fitting clothes."

"Lor, mum," replied the sailor, "It's to allow for shrinkage when we fall overboard."
