Everyman's Hut

Ten things for which no one has ever yet been sorry:—

- For Doing Good to All.
- For Speaking Evil of None.
- For Hearing before Judging.
- For Thinking before Speaking.
- For Holding an Angry Tongue.
- For being Kind to the Distressed.
- For Asking Pardon for All Wrongs.
- For being Patient toward Every-body.
- For Stopping the Ears to a Tale-bearer.
- For Disbelieving most of the Ill-reports.

As a general rule the natural inclinations of the human heart run directly counter to the above maxims. There seems to be that in each heart which responds to evil impulses rather than to good, and which needs to be kept in check continually. The lack of mutual trust and confidence between individuals, between industrial groups, between political parties and between nations has its foundation in the fact that the principles set out in these ten lines are not practised as they should be in all the action and dealings with one another. Many, if not all, of them find a place in the lives of some, but it is in times of stress when serious differences have to be faced and vital decisions made that it seems almost impossible for both parties to meet in that spirit of mental forbearance which is essential to a peaceful settlement of disputes. Goodwill on the one part is not sufficient. To be effective it must be mutual. The old saying goes, "It takes two to make a quarrel," but two are equally necessary to make peace. This is strikingly illustrated in the Divine dealings with man. Although man, in disobedience, had rebelled against God, yet God ever sought to win man back to Himself through repentance, offering pardon to each repentant one. Finally God made the supreme offer—His own Son, in the form of man. The angel sang at His birth "Glory to God in the Highest, on earth peace, goodwill towards men." As a pledge of His goodwill God offered His best, His own Son, but man rejected Him, cast Him out and crucified Him. Yet, in spite of it all, God still offers Him, and to every one that accepts Him and believes His Word. He gives pardon, peace and salvation. He is the only hope for this suffering war-torn world and may the day be not long distant when He, the Prince of Peace, rules as King of kings. Until then, let us seek to broadcast God's goodwill toward all men, that, while there is time many may come to Him with trust and confidence, and prove that their trust is not misplaced, and that what He has promised, He can and does accomplish. "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you."
